One of our sons has become very much taken up with Appleton's Encyclopedia, especially the scientific department.

The use of the locomotive whistle in the city is a thing of the past, the R. R. Co. having issued orders Prohibiting it.

It is a marvel to us that there should be so few fields of buckwheat. It is a profitable crop, the flour being in still greater demand each ensuing year.

The Festival of "Harvest Home" will be celebrated to-morrow morning in St. Luke's church. The church will be appropriately decorated with fruits and flowers.

Whitmore & Bess have put in a stock of flour and feed, etc., in Mr Whitmore's coal office. We saw some nice specimens of bread and cake baked from their patent full roller process flour.

Henry Wilson is mourning a broken arm. Last week, near the Seminary, his team took a sudden fright, threw him out of the wagon and fractured his arm. Fortunately the team wasrecovered without damage.

To-morrow closes up the conference year at the M. E. church. There will be a number received into full membership. Bro. Higgins, the evangelist, will be here and preach in the evening.

Geo. Parsons, though minus a finger, the third on the right hand, has kept right at work. Parties working on a buzz saw catch it sooner or later. A little inadvertence and way goes a digit.

The Ladies Literary Club will meet with Mrs. C. M. Spencer, Wednesday, Sept. 12, at 3. p. m. All interested in the study of English History are cordially invited to be present.

Evening of Aug. 26 there were three baptisms at the Baptist church and one last Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Sunderland makes these baptismal services very solemn and impressive.

The Grammar Department of the Normal school opens Monday, Sept. 17th. The Primary, the 19th. Miss Post will preside in the Grammar room, Miss Coleman in the Primary.

Prof. W. H. Talcott has gained a good reputation in lecturing upon scientific and philosophical subjects as well as phrenological. His means of illustrations are good. He lectured last Monday evening at Sheldons.

Accident.—At the depot, Friday morning, on the central way freight. One of conductor McCollim's brakeman, William Bailey by name. Foot caught in frog while between cars pulling pin. Thrown down and badly mangled. Lived thirty minutes. Home in Toronto, where he leaves widowed mother, and sister. [Facts learned as we go to press.]

For S. P. Ballard's fine poem on education, rules for foretelling the weather, an article on Appleton's Cyclopedia, "The Danger of the Hour," the New York Observer's "No I Thank You" to a lottery scheme, etc., see inside page, opposite story.

Mrs. A. L. Briggs, Saline, who was severely injured in the late R. R. disaster east, has been brought home in a special car. The Observer says "The journey has fatigued her some, but it is thought beyond doubt she will gain much faster now while at home, and her absolute recovery is looked for by her friends."

C. S. Wortley and Robert Lambie met in our office Monday, the former from the National park and the latter from the East, and gave us an interesting comparison of notes. Mr. Wortley's description of the park, the canons and geysers was vivid and exceedingly interesting. From here they went out together and proceeding to Geo. Moorman paid on the Mineral well subscription $2000,00. This makes $4000,00 paid over. Leaving $1000 to be collected and paid.

Editor Ypsilanti Commercial:

Dear Sir—Having seen a notice in your last issue which I knew (in remembrance of your counsel to me) could refer to none other than myself, I take, with much pleasure and with grateful remembrance, this opportunity to express my thanks to you for the kindly interest which you have given to my case and for the counsel to use some of "Ypsilanti's Mineral Water." Not yourself alone, but all my friends and acquaintances in this State are aware that my system was nearly exhausted in consequence of numerous and severe hemorrhages from the lungs which I had suffered. Acting upon your advice, I began using the mineral water both internally and externally. Taking an occasional swallow and a daily bath, and I am happy to say that under the treatment of Dr H. McAndrew I have been steadily improving in health, and to-day as you have so happily expressed it, I "look like a new man" and I can assure you I feel like a new man.

Respectfully yours,
Chas. H. Belmont,

Ypsilanti, Mich., Sept. 3d, 1883.

Mr. Belmont left Monday for his home.

The enrollment of pupils at St. John's Parochial school the first day was 120.

Ben Joslin did not go up in Detroit last Saturday. Detroit gas is at a discount with Ben, failing him completely.

Ex-Postmaster Clark of Ann Arbor has settled the shortage in his accounts by his daughter who is a teacher at Coldwater, paying $500 and his bondsman takes as security for the balance a claim on his property in Dakota.

Miss Susie Gordon of the 4th ward school succeeds Miss Carrie Towner, and Miss Susie Lamb of the 5th ward Miss Joslin in the Central building. The withdrawal of so many pupils from these wards to attend St. John's school makes it necessary temporally at least to diminish the number of teachers in these wards.

Farmers.—Does it pay to allow your noble trees on the road side or in the forest to be destroyed? Do you notice those worm nests, netts spreading over the limbs and devouring the foliage? Why not watch the beginnings, cut down and burn them up? Perhaps your fruit trees are infested. Care and thrift go hand in hand.

John Sixt, the young man mentioned in another column, killed near Dexter was a nephew of Chas, Breining, who resides southeast of here. He took dinner with Nicholas Max about three weeks ago. He had a small amount of Money with him, and that was borrowed. He was on his way to obtain money due him.

The summer is past. The sombre hue and shade of fall is at hand. Amusements along side of sober, practical life, confirm and perpetuates health. Our Opera House opens next Monday evening. John F. Ward, is an Irishman and suggests, as it is a play entitled "Top o' The mornin'" The Irish Lullaby, scenes in the history of Ireland and America, etc. The characters are Irish. There is promised us an unequaled exhibition of Irish wit, repartees, melodies, etc. For caste of characters, admission, etc. see advertisement. Sale of tickets at Dodges.

"TOP O' THE MORNING."

"If I had known this play was so good I would have had it for the opening of the season," said Mr. Wahle last night at the close of the second act of "Top 'o the Mornin'." The play is a merry and sad Irish drama, with all the elements indispensable in such productions, but it is better in its presentation than most Irish dramas now on the stage. John F. Ward, the leading man, is a genius in his way, rollicking, witty, graceful, a good mimic (he plays three parts) and a good singer. He ought to be well known here. He was the comedian of Manager Cars's stock company at Rochester for three years, and was also a member of Meech's company for some time. His songs caught the house, and his little daughter, who plays with a sweet childish grace and sings one of his songs—a lullaby—charmingly, won enthusiastic applause. Miss Mary Davenport is good in the role of the adventurous, and has a fine stage presence. The company is strong in comic features. "Top o' the Mornin'" will be repeated tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow evening. —Buffalo Evening News.

PHILOSOPHY OF ADVERTISING.

Impressing Advertisers with the Desirability of Keeping Their Wares Published.

In his address to the editors of Indiana at their meeting at Fort Wayne, says the Philadelphia Record, Col. Gil. Pierce, of the Chicago Daily News, presented the following thoughts with reference to advertising, which are worth remembering. He said:

"And in presenting a beautiful sheet typographically one should remember the advertisers as well as the readers. A man likes to have his advertisement pleasing to look upon, catching to the eye, and indicative generally of the advertiser. This class of patrons are so important to success that they should receive every encouragement. Particularly should they be impressed with the desirability of keeping their wares before the public. A man never realizes the full benefits of advertising till he has placed the matter before the same people fifty or a hundred times. The first ad is good, but the one hundredth is worth more than five hundred times as much as the first. Some one has said that the—

First time a man looks at an advertisement he does not see it.

The second time he does not notice it.

The third time he is dimly conscious of it.

The fourth time he faintly remembers something of the kind before.

The fifth time he half reads it.

The sixth time he turns his nose up at it.

The seventh time he throws the paper down impatiently.

The eighth time he ejaculates: "There's the confounded thing again."

The ninth time he wonders if there's anything in it.

The tenth time he thinks it might possibly suit somebody else's case.

The eleventh time he thinks he will ask his neighbor if he has tried it, or knows anything about it.

The twelfth time he wonders if the advertiser can make it pay.

The thirteenth time he rather thinks it must be a good thing.

The fourteenth time he happens to think it is just what he wanted.

The fifteenth time he for a long time resolves to try it as soon as he can afford it.

The sixteenth time he examines the address carefully and makes a memorandum of it.

The seventeenth time he is tantalized to think he can hardly afford it.

The eighteenth time he sees painfully how much he is in need of that particular article.

The nineteenth time he counts his money to see how much he would have left if he bought it.

The twentieth time he rushes frantically forth and buys it.

Judge Ninde desired us to say to the voters that he would under no circumstances allow his name to be used as a member of the School Board. We refused to say so and he is elected, nolens volens, still protesting and yet consenting.

SUPPLYING THE CAPITOL.

Dr. A. V. P. Garnett of Washington D. C. has ordered through Sgt. John P. Finley fifteen gals. of the Ypsilanti Mineral water for his own use. The Dr. writes to Mr. Finley that he is much pleased with the medicinal effects of the water and has recommended its use to some of his patients. This is a decided compliment to the virtue of the Ypsilanti mineral water as Dr. Garnett is one of the most celebrated physicians in the East, being summoned during Gen. Garfield's illness and at the bedside of the late Judge Black. Sgt. Finley is getting good endorsements of the mineral water in Washington.

MONDAY'S ELECTION AND SCHOOL MEETING.

Thomas Ninde and John Taylor were elected members of the Board. The vote stood—

T. Ninde	201
John Taylor	139
I. N. Conklin	30
P. Ferrier	27
A. J. Murray	3
Mrs. E. B. Dunham	3
E. P. Allen	1

The evening meeting was not very largely attended. The main business, voting a tax of $12,715.79 being quickly dispensed with. A resolution was passed authorizing the board to prepare a statement of the present, past and future of the school which will probably appear next week.

THE FIRE.

The local editor took special pains to secure the following information last week. Being written in an insurance office and laid away in a side pocket, it was overlooked, hence failed to be in last week's paper, alongside with some other matters. Read it as if inserted last week: Monday noon, the residence of Mrs. L. M. Tuttle, on Harriet street, caught fire from a defect in the chimney. Mrs. Tuttle was down town at the time and her niece was preparing the dinner. It soon got beyond control and set fire to an adjoining house which was consumed. Both houses were owned by Mrs. Tuttle. The contents were destroyed, including the clothing and a valuable library. The insurance on the property, houses and contents, was $2,600. New Hampshire Co., $500, Capt. Spencer, agent, and Watertown, H. H. Brinkerhoff, agent, $2,100.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Last Sabbath afternoon by the kindness of Dea. W. J. Canfield the editor and wife visited the Sunday school in the Preston neighborhood, on the Saline road of which Mr. Canfield has been for several years the superintendent. There is a large attendance, a school house full of pupils, teachers and friends, a large class of young ladies and also of young men. The singing, Mr. M. F. Case at the organ, was spirited and good. The national series of lessons are in use, and the lesson of last Sabbath "Samson" was an interesting one, developing the fundamental idea. Obedience—life, strength, prosperity. Disobedience—death, failure, wreck and ruin. Obedie nce making the weak strong, disobedience the strong weak. Rev. Mr. Davis a missionary from the south, who is temporally stopping in the city was present, and made some instructive remarks. The school voted to continue until Nov. 1st, though Mr. Canfield will have to be absent on his county superintendency work a part of the time. This school has been very successful and we trust a mine of good. It would be a grand thing for the country if every district could have so useful a Sunday school.

B. F. FOWLER IN DAKOTA.

Messrs. Glover and Wortley had a little time on hand at Dickinson and going around the town, came to the neatest store on the street, stopping in front, the proprietor way back said "come in." They reported that "time was too short in this fast country," and started on, when they heard a voice "Clark come back," and lo it was B. F. Fowler. Mr. N. Fowler says he would be glad to accept his son's invitation but cannot at present.

Dickinson, D. T. Aug. 7th 1883.

Dear Father.—We are all well and hearty. It has been pretty dry here this season, and the crops are a little short. The country is pretty new yet, not much breaking had been done before this season. This has been a great point for hunters the past years, and will be this coming winter. There was about two hundred and fifty thousand buffalo hides shipped from here this spring. One man shot 1300. There was sixty killed the other day out about thirty miles. One man shot them in about two hours. Had a chance to go out to day, but could not get away. This fall there is a party of us going about sixty miles to the Badlands and take our families to shoot deer, will be gone about two weeks and camp out, so if you come out about that time you can get about all the shooting you want. All kinds of game, deer, bear, elk, antelope, and grouse, can shoot deer as we used to shoot rabbits, only thicker.

A special dispatch from the German town of Westhal says that during the ceremony of opening a bridge at that place the structure gave way, precipitating a large number of people into the water. The Mayor of the town and many workmen were killed. The number of injured is not known, but it is thought to be very great.

FORTY PERSONS RUN OVER.

DETAILS OF THE RAILWAY ACCIDEET IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, Sept. 5.

A train from Berlin passing Steglitz yesterday, ran into a number of passengers who were standing on the track waiting to take another train running into the city. Seventeen men, eighteen women, and four children were killed. The train, it seems, dashed into the midst of a large crowd, killing, cutting and hurling people right and left. Most of the victims belong to the artisan class. After the catastrophe the railway was found covered for a hundred yards with bodies shockingly mutilated. Of a family of five persons only one escaped. A sailor and a woman were decapitated. The engine was covered with pieces of flesh, bones and rags, and drenched with blood. The engine-driver was overcome by the horrible sight. The line was blocked for several hours. The remains were gathered by torchlight by firemen and soldiers, and taken to the Berlin morgue.

WAR INEVITABLE.

The Standard's Hong Kong special states that 4,000 Chinese troops stationed at Pakoi have been ordered to the frontier. The Annamites still threaten Namdinh. There is much excitement at Hong Kong consequent upon the reception of news here that Chinese troops were crossing Mong Kai. This means that China has accepted the gage that France has thrown down, and that war is inevitable.

REINFORCEMENTS FROM FRANCE.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 6.

The Governor of the Dutch East Indies telegraphs that the town of Telokbelong was probably totally destroyed by the recent volcanic eruption. The district in which that town is situated is entirely inaccessible, as all round it is obliterated. There is nothing from Lampong, on the southern coast of Sumatra. DECISION OF THE FRENCH CABINET.

PARIS, Sept. 6.

The French Cabinet decided that upon his arrival at Paris the Marquis Tseng, the Chinese Ambassador, be asked to explain the reason for the movement of Chinese troops to the Tonquin frontier. The Ministry is seriously weighing the prospect of a war with China, which event is now considered by no means impossible.

Admiral Peyron, the Minister of Marine, remains in Paris to superintend the dispatch of reinforcements to the French contingent in Tonquin.

MAKING READY FOR WAR.

A French naval demonstration is regarded as probable on the Chinese coast in the direction of Canton. Admiral Peyron, the Minister of Marine and the Colonies, has a telegram from Saigon saying that, according to Mandarin accounts, 1,200 Anamese were killed and 1,000 wounded during the recent bombardment of the forts on the Hue River. Besides two transports leaving with 10,000 men for Tonquin between the 10th and 20th, another transport will take a battery of mountain guns and material for 4,000 men from the African army. The newspapers demand that the Government shall explain the real situation of affairs connected with the Tonquin difficulty. The Chamber of Deputies will probably be convoked to consider the relations of China and France. The general impression is that France has gone too far to retreat.

OLD NEPTUNE'S RAGE.

HEAVY GALE ON THE ATLANTIC COAST.

Terrible Tales Told by Captains of Craft Arriving in Port on Sunday—Whole Crews Swept from the Rigging of Ships by Mountainous Waves.

OLD NEPTUNE'S RAGE.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 3.

The first reliable information of the loss of life in the recent terrible storm on the coast of Nova Scotia came to hand Sunday the sad news being of the drowning of nineteen Lunenburg fishermen by the wrecking of two vessels, and the probable death also of an entire crew of another bark. Benjamin Himmelman, of Lunenburg, owner of the schooner Welcome, received intelligence of the swamping of his vessel near East Cape, Prince Edward Island, during a gale, and the loss of ten of her men, one member of the crew surviving. The Welcome heaving off the cape at the beginning of the storm lowered both her anchors and for several hours rode safely at sea. Late at night, however, when the gale became more furious, the vessel began to strain seriously, and mountainous waves struck her sides violently, and swept over the decks, carrying everything moveable before them. Eleven fishermen on board at last were compelled to cling continually to the rigging for safety, and were unable to move a hand to attempt to control the schooner. About three o'clock in the morning a wave of great size struck her with disastrous violence and the next moment she sank, carrying with her all those on board. One of the crew, a young man named Spindle, arose to the surface and fortunately fell in with a floating spar of the sunken Welcome. Seizing this, ten minutes later he was carried high and dry on East cape. Spindle states that after the schooner went down he saw nothing of his comrades, and all undoubtedly were drowned. Five of the crew were named Himmelman, three of them being sons of Benjamin Himmelman and the other two being their cousins. The names of the rest on board are at present unknown, but all were natives of the county Lunenburg. The sunken Welcome lies on her beam ends in twelve fathoms of water. She was a vessel of forty-five tons register and built at La Have in 1876.

The second disaster happened but a short distance off the port of Halifax, but the survivors were taken from the wrecked vessel by another and carried to Lunenburg. They reached the latter place Sunday forenoon. The schooner J. W. Russell, of Mahone Bay, Captain Allen Ernst, was on her way from Bank Quero to Lunenburg with 450 quintals of fish on board. The gale came on her early Wednesday evening, when about sixty miles to the westward of Sambro light, and to increase her chance of riding through safely she was brought to an anchorage. The wind rapidly increased in violence, and shortly after darkness set in the storm was accompanied by thunder and lightning. About ten o'clock a violent gust struck the vessel, and she was hove on her beam ends in the tempestuous sea. Waves of fearful size washed over her continually. Everything on deck was soon swept away and her hatches were stove in, water in great quantity pouring into the hold. The forcastle in which the steward of the schooner and a boy had taken refuge was broken in and filled with water, and its two occupants perished. They were unable to succeed in their struggle for life. By this time the remainder of the crew had taken refuge in the rigging, in the hope that they would be able to cling there until the storm had spent its fury. One after another seven of these were carried away by the sea, and after vain and heartrending efforts to regain the vessel, sank before their shipmates' eyes. Four only of the crew, numbering thirteen, were now left, but these, after many terrible struggles to keep themselves from being washed from the rigging, at last found the storm abating and daylight approaching. During the morning the Gloucester fishing schooner Flora Delmer, Captain Frank Wright, hove in sight of the wrecked vessel and the half-drowned survivors, and succeeded in getting the men from their perilous positions.

Iowa's Semi-Centennial Celebrated.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Sept. 5.

Dubuque celebrated the semi-centennial of the settlement of Iowa Monday by one of the largest assemblages ever seen in the State. Many thousands of visitors were present, and the grounds where the exercises were held contained at least 12,000 people. Among the notables present were General A. C. Dodge, of Burlington; E. B. Washburne and General Chetlain, of Chicago; ex-Governor Clark, of Illinois, and many others. The procession was a mile long, and the city was decorated with flags, wreaths, flowers and other ornaments. Three grand arches spanned Main street, on which were hung appropriate legends. The exercises were opened with prayer by Deacon Rupert, and addresses were delivered by Judge Wilson, General Washburne, General Chetlain and A. C. Dodge. The affair was a great success.

Colored Ghouls Lynched.

EDWARDS, Miss., Sept. 6.

James King and George Gaddis, negroes, were arrested Tuesday, charged with robbing the grave of Mrs. Hattie Howell. They confessed the crime, informing the officers that they stole the body for the purpose of securing the bones of the arm, which they used in their profession of conjurers. When the news of the robbery and arrest became known a crowd of 150 men assembled and demanded of the Sheriff to turn over the prisoners. He refused. In the confusion, Gaddis attempted to escape and was riddled with bullets by the crowd. The Sheriff was then overpowered and the other prisoner was taken from the jail and hanged.

ORGANIZED LABOR.

Monster Demonstration and Parade of Trade and Labor Societies in New York City—Twenty Thousand Workmen in Line—The Mottoes Displayed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.

The monster demonstration and parade of the trades and labor organizations Wednesday was an immense success. The parade was participated in by the trades-unions of this city, Brooklyn, Jersey City and other adjacent towns, and it is estimated that at least twenty thousand men were in line, making it the largest labor parade ever witnessed here. For hours before ten o'clock—the time announced when the procession would move—the streets leading to the Cooper Institute, where the main division of the procession was to form, were crowded with people in sympathy with the movement. The procession formed three divisions. Shortly after eleven o'clock the first division, headed by the Grand Marshal, marched down the Bowery, and at Fourth street met the second division. It was then that the full strength of the parade was seen. Each division had a band of music, and many of the unions were headed by their own band. Each union had its flag or banner, and in addition to these there were a number of mottoes indicative of the workingmen's sentiments as regards capital and monopoly. Among the most prominent were "No More Convict Labor." "We Must Own the Monopolies or They Will Own Us." "Watch the Tools of the Monopolies in the Legislatures." "No More Child Labor." "Let Us Fight for Eight Hours." "Convict Labor is Repugnant to American Principles." "The Modern Industrial System Increases Capital and Poverty," and "Every Man Should Have a Breech-Loader and Know How to Use It." All along the line of the route these mottoes were loudly applauded. After the line had been formed the procession moved down the Bowery to Broome street, across to Center street, down to Chamber street, over to Broadway, and up to the plaza to Union square. At this point the procession was reviewed by Henry George, John Swinton, Dr. A. Doual, Patrick Ford, Louis F. Post, H. A. Phellan and Robert Blissert. The procession then moved on to Fifth avenue and up that thoroughfare to Reservoir square, where, amid loud cheering, the unions were dismissed. Each union then proceeded to Elm Park, at Ninety-second street and Ninth avenue. Those of the unions having bands marched, and the others went by the cars. Here a picnic and festival was held, and games were indulged in during the afternoon. In the evening a number of speeches were made by labor advocates.

AN OUTCOME OF THE STRIKE.

A Grand Co-Operative Telegraph Company Organized in Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 3.

The Citizens and Telegraphers' National Union Telegram and Cablegram Company was incorporated Friday with a capital stock of $5,000,000, divided into shares of $25 each. No person will be permitted to hold more than $100,000 worth. The object of the company is to purchase or construct and operate independent telegraph and cable lines in the United States and Canada and across the Atlantic. There are to be thirteen Trustees or Directors, of whom seven shall represent the citizens and six the telegraphers. The subscription books will be opened September 15. Lines will be built or purchased and operated no faster than subscriptions to the stock shall provide the means. Every employe and officer must be a stockholder. The corporators named in the document are Eugene J. O'Connor, Charles E. Chute and Thomas F. Greene, of Boston.

Governor Butler is said to be one of the heavy backers of the new company. The organization is an outcome of the recent telegraph strike. Its projectors say that they will have one hundred wires in four cables of twenty-five wires each in operation between Boston and New York before January 1, and eventually will extend their lines throughout the country. They may combine with the Baltimore & Ohio but will not under any circumstances unite with the Postal Telegraph Company. They will use the straight Morse system.

The articles of incorporation provide that the wires in cities shall be placed underground so far as practicable; the telephone patents may be purchased and telephone business transacted; that the term of existence of the company shall be fifty years; that the executive board shall consist of eight members, of whom four shall be from each of the classes specified; that the main office shall be in New York City and branch offices in Boston, Chicago, Washington, Charleston, New Orleans, San Francisco, and such other places as may be deemed necessary, and that as soon as $200,000 shall have been subscribed to the stock, work on the construction of the lines shall begin.

To guard against any selling out of the company or any hawking of its stock about the market, ample precautions have been taken. Every officer and employe of the company will be a stockholder, and thus the company will be managed and controlled by the men who will do the practical work upon it. There will be no increase in the capital stock without a corresponding extension of the franchise. There can be no selling out or consolidation, and by economical and intelligent management the rates for telegraphic and cable messages will be largely reduced.

The American Association will abollsh what is knowu as the eleven reserve rule. Thus far the clubs entered are: New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago and Indianapolis. In addition it is expected the St. Louis and Cincinnati Clubs will be represented at the meeting alluded to. James Jackson, of New York, is the projector of the new association.

A BOLD ROBBERY.

A Stage-Coach Near Boston Stopped at Midnight by a Band of Thirty Highwaymen—The Inmates Brutally Mistreated and Robbed of Valuables.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 6.

The annual illumination at Nantasket Beach Monday night drew together about twenty thousand people. The display and festivities continued until a late hour. The facilities for transporting so large a crowd was altogether inadequate, and it was midnight before many of the spectators could leave the beach. A party of ten ladies and gentlemen from East Weymouth chartered the large stage Minnie of that place and left the Hotel Nantasket at about one o'clock. They had proceeded as far as the foot of the Old Colony House hill, where there is a thickly-wooded and very lonesome spot, and where the road runs for a mile and a half through a dense forest. There they came upon a gang of twenty-five or thirty desperate characters, some of whom were in an express wagon and others on foot. As the stage drove up these men made a rush for it. Two of them seized the horses by the heads, while the others surrounded the stage, cursing and threatening to shoot the driver when he attempted to whip up his horses.

Edward Hawley, who was standing on the steps in the rear, was seized by two of the ruffians, who threw him down upon the ground and beat him severely, tearing off most of his clothing and kicking him brutally about the head and body. His nose was broken and he was otherwise terribly injured. During the scuffle the men secured his watch and chain and pocket-book, containing a large sum.

In the meantime the rest of the gang had set upon other gentlemen in the stage, who, being altogether unarmed, could make no resistance. James Burke, Thomas McFawn and David Queen were brutally beaten, and suffered serious injuries. One of them was robbed of a valuable pin and three lost their watches and other jewelry, and what money they had. The ladies were very roughly handled, and robbed of their jewelry, watches and purses. The robbers only laughed at their pleas and swore louder.

The men at the heads of the horses presently relaxed their vigilence and their grip on the bridles and the driver of the stage, taking instant advantage of this, whipped up his horses and rattled off down the road at a full gallop. The robbers jumped into their express wagon and drove swiftly after the flying stage for over a mile, but on nearing the town of Hingham they stopped the pursuit. Many of the ladies were seriously prostrated by fright.

Hiccoughs Likely to End in Death.

CAIRO, Sept. 6.

A negro named Wesley Broaddust, living at Paducah Ky., was six days ago taken with hiccoughs, and up to the present date has hiccoughed incessantly night and day, whether asleep or awake, under the influence of opiates or otherwise, and under all circumstances. This convulsive disease can only end at the grave unless some antidote can be discovered by the nonplussed physicians. Everything known to the medical profession has signally failed in this remarkable case, and great excitement prevails, especially among the colored fraternity, who deem the poor man to be infested with blue devils. The hiccoughs are becoming hourly more frequent, and can be heard across the street. The man is large, robust and hearty, but is growing rapidly weaker. The singular case is attracting much interest and comment, especially among medical men.

John Jacob Astor Deeds Away His Property.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.

John Jacob Astor has deeded all his property to his only son, William Waldorf Astor, now United States Minister to Rome. The news created a profound sensation, and old lawyers declared that it was only another movement by the Astors not to permit the value of their immense estate to be publicly known. John Jacob Astor is now an old man, and although in apparent good health, the question of wills, deeds, heirs and surrogate courts must occur to him. The deeds will not be recorded until after his death. His son receives everything, subject to a pension of $100,000 per annum payable to his father during his life. The value of the estate is estimated at between $60,000,000 and $70,000,000.

Shot in a Sham Battle.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 6.

During a sham battle at the grand encampment at Princeton Junction Wednesday thirteen soldiers were wounded severely enough to require surgical attendance. All but three or four were able to be around after their wounds were dressed. The injuries of the others are painful but not serious. The wounds were received by powder and wads fired directly into each other's faces when the opposing lines came nearer together in the excitement of the fight than was safe.

A PLEASANT LETTER.

It Rings of a Greatful Heart and gives Honor where Honor is Due.

Mr. William W. Chadwick, of Hatchville, Conn., writes under date of June 14, 1880, to Dr. Kennedy to say that the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" has cured him of Gall Stone, from which he had experienced everything but comfort for a long time. Mr. Chadwick felt wholly cured when he wrote, and says: "I have had no pain for six months, and have also regained my flesh and can stand a fair day's work. I recommend 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' to any one suffering from a deranged liver." Grateful patients are common. Dr. Kennedy is daily in receipt of letters from them, expressing similar sentiments. These letters are spontaneous and put in all varieties of phraseology, but invariably setting forth one thing—the value of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for many forms of disease. It may be just the thing you have been looking for. Is your Liver disordered? Have you Derangement of the Kidneys or Bladder, associated with Constipation of the Bowels? If so, you want "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy." Dr. Kennedy practices Medicine and Surgery in all their branches. Write and state your case frankly. Letters promptly answered. How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases.

Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

Send 2 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

FRATERNITY GRANGE.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY, AUG. 18, '83.

Worthy Master, the Worthy Lecturer
Requested me to write
A poem for you and recite
It here to-day,
So I'll adjust my thought
And bear away.

And Education is to be the theme—
In all the past it formed
The poet's dream.
Not dream of luxury in the common sense
But, better far, a joyous recompense
For toil expended in a common cause—
The betterment of man by teaching laws
In rythmic sentences, sublime and sweet
As the aroma that so often greets
The senses when the flowers by zephyrs stirred
Exhale their sweetness for the common herd.

Man feels at home in Nature's fair retreat
Where birds and flowers, commingling, repeat
The uplifted strain that reaches heaven's dome,
The source from which all rapt emotions come.

The starting place is mind, the throne of law,
Where principles enshrined, without a flaw,
Co-operate to form the tidal wave
That brings fruition to the power it laves.

Permit me then to speak
Of Education here
As the incarnate good,
Without a peer
In all the realms of space.
To it we rear
Vast temples, built of marble.
In the halls we hang the works of art;
The frescoed walls
Proclaim its worth.
In every land it is the prince of peace.
At its command
The force that formed the giant hills
Comes forth to do its bidding.
Like the rills, at one with Nature
Till the victor speaks,
When, lo, a ripple on the surface seeks
To explain the force that Nature cradled there
To do the bidding of this prince, the heir
Of God and king of Nature
At whose beck and nod
The viewless air pays tribute,
While the sun aids the explorer.
As the lightnings run
On errands o'er the earth
In his behest, the purposes
Of God are manifest.

See star-eyed Science
Wheeling into line
To aid the child of research,
Delving in the mine
Of infinite intelligence.
Grave doubts are hushed,
Disputes and wranglings cease—
In Education see the prince of peace.

The schools of art, where scholars meet and greet
Each other, like sweet vesper bells repeat
The tribute paid to literature by the devotee
Of art whose fame immensity
Takes up as onward speeds the car
That, like the central sun or circling star,
Proclaims the fiat of the human mind
Above the raging storm whose track is lined
With wrecks of matter strewn along its path
When warring forces form the storm king's wrath.

See yonder tower aglow with human thought!
The victor, king—the conqerer who wrought
In matter forms the lens
By which he sweeps the horizon, as his thought
The starry pathway of the sky [ascends
Is brought within the reach of human eye.

Lo, central suns in systems vast,
Beyond our own, are sweeping past
Each other in the trackless realm
Where Science guides and facts o'erwhelm
The illiterate, who stand aghast and say,
Behold in Science that which leads astray.

But scholars hold directly to their course
With maps and charts that help them to enforce
The mighty truths that Nature doth reveal
To their inquiring minds where God hath set his seal.

The uplifted rocks proclaim what life has traced
Upon their surface, starting at the base
Of the stupendous whence
In the great whither seeking recompense
For toil, behold it in the school,
Where Education gives the right to rule.

Who speaks for Education speaks for God;
Who teaches youth to obey the beck and nod
Of law announces to a waiting world
That Education with her charts unfurled
Will stem the tide though storm and tempest roar;
For Education forms and wields the oar
That stirs the waters of the primal sea
Far out from shore.

Great ruler of the world enthroned in mind,
Is there a place where all may equal chances find,
Behold it in the schoolroom where the class
Recite their lessons. As the subjects pass,
Each in review, before the scholar's mind
He quickly learns. Who seeks shall find
That mind is king, that thought is lord
At reason's bar with justice they accord;
They teach the objective plan to us revealed
In laws potential that the scholar wields
As he ascends the height to write his name
Above the smoke of battle on the scroll of fame.

HOW TO FORETELL THE WEATHER.

The Farmers' club of the American institute has issued the following rules for foretelling the weather. If farmers and others whose business is out doors and depends upon the weather will study them closely they will be able to guess the weather more accurately than Wigging or Vennor:

1. When the temperature falls suddenly there is a storm forming south of you.

2. When the temperature rises suddenly there is a storm forming north of you.

3. The wind always blows from a region of fair weather toward a region where a storm is forming.

4. Cirrus clouds always move from a region where a storm is in progress to a region of fair weather.

5. Cumulus clouds always move from a region of fair weather to a region where a storm is forming.

6. Where cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from the north or northeast there will be rain inside of twenty-four hours, no matter how cold it is.

7. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from the south or southeast there will be a cold rainstorm on the morrow, if it be in summer, and if it be in winter there will be a snowstorm.

8. The wind always blows in a circle around a storm, and when it blows from the north the rain is heaviest east of you; if it blows from the south the heaviest rain is west of you; if it blows from the east the heaviest rain is south; if it blows from the west the heaviest rain is north of you.

9. The wind never blows unless rain or snow is falling within 1,000 miles of you.

10. Whenever heavy white frost occurs a storm is forming within 1,000 miles north or northwest of you.

We have another sign that has seldom failed. In hot or sultry summer weather, cirrus clouds, membraneous, thin clouds or presenting a wooley aspect, lying low at the north and northeast before 7 o'clock in the morning is a sign of rain before night. If hay is down take care of it and don,t cut more than you can care for before 3 p. m.

No progress can be real and lasting in a nation which has not deep religious convictions.—Gladstone.

DETROIT, June 12, 1883.

From long familiarity with Appleton's American Cyclopedia we believe it to be for an American citizen the best work of which we have any knowledge, it being a comprehensive view of the world from the earliest authentic history to the present time. It is full of facts on the rise and progress of nations. It is complete in biography. Its articles on science are by the best scholars of these times. In it a person may find satisfactory information on all subjects of iuterest. It is invaluable in every family, and where it is accessible to the children they can not fail to grow up well educated, and where children are in school the book doubly repays its cost in the ease and rapidity with which the child will get its education. It constitutes a valuable library in itself. We can and do most cordially recommend it, and should be glad to know it was in every family in the country. The terms upon which it can be had are so reasonable that it is within the easy reach of almost every family. The entire work is furnished at once, and the payment extends over a period of two years. Fifteen cents a day secures the treasure. With it and the Bible you are well furnished.

THE DANGER OF THE HOUR.

RAPIDLY INCREASING FATALITY OF DISEASE IN THIS COUNTRY—TIMELY SUGGESTIONS OF NO LITTLE IMPORTANCE AND INTEREST.

So ominous, so alarming are the results of disease becoming that we are being constantly told by medical men, by the press and by the pulpit to be on our guard. To cease our indifference and negligence and give some thought as to how we can best protect ourselves from sickness. The advancement of thought on this great problem is doing much to quicken an interest in the people, and rapidly educating them that to prevent sickness is of far greater importance than to cure. That prevention is the wisest, surest and most economical plan, while curing disease is often attended with doubt, anxiety, and sometimes great expense. These facts become more apparent and important to us when our attention is called, as it now is daily to a sudden death by heart disease, to the frequent deaths by Bright's disease of the kidneys; and when we think of the countless thousands afflicted with some form of Kidney, Liver or Stomach disorder though the most frequent complaints yet the chief source of many a fatal sickness. A sad but notable instance of this fact has recently occurred in the death of the late lamented prima donna, Mille Litta, it being now known that she was afflicted with a Kidney and Stomach trouble, which was, if not the direct, the remote cause of her death.

These disorders are the cause of mental anxiety, general debility, loss of sleep, and we might say of all ill health. How necessary is it then that if there be a possible way of escape from all this suffering we should at once know it. If we have the slightest symptoms of sickness how important to know what to do.

We believe the time has come when it can be said with confidence that there is now no way be but positive assurance that sickness and disease has found its greatest antagonist. If true, how important yet certain it is that this belief is becoming prevalent and that the German pharmaceutical remedy, Alaxine, is the greatest preventive and surest restorer of lost health now known. Incredible as this statement may seem it is now publicly made, not on what is anticipated of Alaxine, but on what it has done in so many wonderful instances as to warrant such encouraging claims. We have just ascertained interesting facts of a remarkable recovery of health that has recently occurred at Bellefontaine, O., by its use, after all other means of treatment had utterly failed. Colonel F. S. Case, a prominent druggist of the above town, knowing of the ill health of one of the most reputable citizens of his place, J. D. McCracken, Esq., advised him to give Alaxine a thorough trial. Mr. McCracken had been a great sufferer with a stomach and kidney disorder for fifteen years, and during this time had tried remedy after remedy, but with no lasting benefit. At times, said he, I would have to give up work altogether, could get but little sleep, was melancholy, appetite poor, and had severe attacks of sick headache, frequently had numbness and chilly sensations, in fact felt tired and worn out, although I was around a great deal of the time, and it was little known that I suffered so much except by my most intimate friends. But since using Alaxine I feel like a different man. Before I had taken half of the contents of a bottle of it I began to feel its marvelous strengthening power. Its effect on my stomach was surprising as I can now digest the heartiest food without suffering, whereas before I was in constant distress even after eating a light meal. My kidneys seem to be sound and healthy, as I have experienced no trouble since the use of this remedy. Better than all else, I am entirely free from nervousness and those strange, dizzy attacks of the head which one cannot deny are alarming. For these complaints Alaxine is well worth trying.

But, said he, what Alaxine did for me does not compare with what it has done for my daughter who is now fourteen years of age. Every since she was seven years old she has been a great sufferer with a liver and stomach trouble, never had a good appetited, was dizzy and nervous, terrible attacks of sick headache, weak and emaciated, and it was with great difficulty she could keep up with her studies in school. The slightest exertion caused shortness of breath. In fact she was fast becoming a confirmed invalid, and alarmed as we were we could not find a physician or a remedy that could benefit or cure her. As soon as I found how fast I was being helped by Alaxine we commenced giving it to her, and we have the great satisfaction of knowing that she is fast being cured. She never has had as good health as now. It is from innumerable statements of this character that is causing Alaxine to be considered one of the great and important benefits to mankind. If good health can be generally insured by its use, it is subordinate to no discovery or invention of modern times.

Every now and then a national bank goes to smash, and such an occurrence always detracts from the high estimation in which the system is held by some people. The system is a ward of the government. It is under the government's special care. The government furnishes it with blank notes, and vouches for its reliability. It employs an officer to go about and examine the books and condition of the banks, and by its official connection with the system, puts the public off its guard. But the bank examiner never finds anything wrong. He seems to be as blind as an average legislative committee, and the first that he seems to know about the unsoundness of a bank is when it closes its doors in the face of an army of unprotected depositors, who usually have far more interest in a bank than the holders of its circulation have. Recently there was a national bank failure in New England. We presume the bank examiner has heard of it by this time. Its president had been borrowing money of the bank in direct violation of law; but the examiner did not know it. At least he manifested no knowledge of it; and in the light of experience we are inclined to think that the expression, "the best banking system in the world" will have to be modified by adding, "if the bank doesn't burst."—Western Rural.

THE HIGHER MOTIVE.

John B. Gough, in a temperance lecture, related a conversation he once had with a christian gentleman in England on total abstinence. The gentleman remarked: "I have a conscientious objection to teetotalism, and it is this: Our Savior made wine at ths marriage of Cana in Galilee."

"I know he did."

"He made it because they wanted it."

"So the Bible tells us."

"He made it of water."

"Yes."

"Well, he performed a miracle to make that wine."

"Yes."

"Then he honored and sanctified wine by performing a miracle to make it. Therefore," said he, "I feel that, if I should give up the use of wine, I should be guilty of ingratitude, and reproaching my Master."

"Sir," said I. "I can understand how you should feel so; but is there nothing else that you put by, which our Savior has honored?"

"No, I don't know that there is."

"Do you eat barley bread?"

"No," and then began the laugh.

"And why?"

"Because I don't like it."

"Very well, sir," said I, "our Savior sanctified barley bread just as much as he ever did wine. He fed five thousands people on barley loaves by a miracle. You put away barley bread from the low motive of not liking it. I ask you to put away wine from the higher motive of bearing the infirmity of your weaker brother, and so fulfilling the law of Christ."

If your lungs are weak, if a cold causes you quick distress, you will strengthen the pulmonary organs, you will feel better every way if you will occasionally use Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Ask your druggist for it.

Nervous, dyspeptic individuals, whose distress of mind and body make life miserable, if your sufferings have been prolonged and increased by the use of bitters and pretend cures of kidney and liver diseases, throw all such nostrums aside and find health strength and vigor in that simple remedy known as Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood, strengthens the urinary and digestive organs, and infuses new life into all parts of the body. No other remedy equals it. Have your druggist get it for you.

It makes every humanitarian sad to see invalids seek such relief as is given them by the use of bitters, kidney medicines, and other nostrums. The first few doses may make them feel better on account of its stupefying ingredients, combined with some strong cathartic and diuretic that are used in its composition, but they eventually grow worse. The only cure for weakness, nervousness, debility, aches, pains, rheumatism, sores, urinary and digestive troubles, is to make the blood rich, red and pure, by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, a remedy widely indorsed by physicians who have examined into its composition and effect.

To the Editor:—The publication of the following will be appreciated and may further the ends of justice.

On the 27th of August there was found in the woods skirting Marshall the body of a man shot through the heart. All the circumstances point to a murder. Nothing was found to aid identification except a M. C. R. R. lay-over check, dated Aug. 12, entitling the holder to a passage from Ann Arbor to Dexter, and a picture of a couple of young ladies. The deceased was a man between thirty and forty years of age, five feet nine or ten inches in height, sandy hair, weighed about 150 pounds, and was dressed in a dark checked suit, white shirt, calf-skin boots, and black wool hat with a cord for a band. There was a small patch on the pants near the knee. The picture was a tin type of two ladies, evidently sisters, aged between 20 and 30 years, in a sitting posture, with hair "banged." The shorter of the two wore a dress with a heavily pleated skirt. The officers at Marshall are desirous of obtaining a clue to identify the man and discover the murderer.

The American Institute on Speer's Wines.

A committee was appointed to visit Alfred Speer's Vineyards at Passaic, N. J. to examine his wines and cellars and report. The following is a part of the report: Many will be a little surprised to learn that within so short a distance from this city, has been prosecuted an enterprise of so much importance, and with so much success.

The qualities of these wines are not excelled by any producer in the world and during the season when the operations of handling the grapes expressing the juices and the other treatment are in active progress it is interesting and instructive to visit the vineyards and witness the operation.

HAY FEVER.

For twenty-five years I have been severely afflicted with Hay Fever. While I was suffering intensely I was induced, through Mr. Tichenor's testimonial, to try Ely's Cream Balm. The effect was marvelous. It enabled me to perform my pastoral duties without the slightest inconvenience, and I have escaped a return attack. I pronounce Ely's Cream Balm a cure for Hay Fever. WM. DEATH IN A FIRE-TRAP.

DESTRUCTION OF A RAG WAREHOUSE.

The Inmates Either Forced to Leap from the Windows or Meet a Terrible Fate—Nine Human Beings Believed to be Buried Underneath the Debris.

CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 4.

Monday afternoon a fire broke out in Henry Drehman & Co.'s six-story brick hemp manufactory, 232 Walnut street. Igniting from a gas jet, the entire structure was in flames within an extraordinary short time, and the fire was spreading to the adjoining buildings. The Evening Times-Star is the contiguous building on the south. The fifth and sixth floors of the paper mentioned were gutted. The composing-room was located on the sixth floor, and the compositors escaped with only their lives. Ten of them were on an elevator trying to get below to escape, when the car stopped of its own accord between two floors, creating the greatest imaginable consternation, but as the fire began to pour into the well the car resumed its trip to the lower floor, and the terrified men got out all right. The fire first appeared in the press-room of the Times-Star, but by prompt work the valuable press was saved from serious damage. Offers of assistance were freely made the managers of the paper by other offices, and the publication of the Times-Star will be resumed at once at either the News-Journal or Volksblat office.

The Times-Star loss is covered by $15,000 insurance. Henry Drehman & Co.'s building was burned out completely, and the stock entirely destroyed. No. 234 Walnut was occupied by Henry Drehman as a rag warehouse. This building was so badly burned that it collapsed, and now there is not one brick on top of the other. The stock was also consumed. An employe named Gus Huber was fatally burned. Several firemen were seriously injured by falling walls, and a girl named Rachel King had a leg broken by jumping out of a window. Henry Drehman & Co. and Henry Drehman's loss on stock is $50,000; insured for $15,000. Several other buildings were damaged. The entire loss will reach $75,000.

At 5:30 a great crowd still lingered about the ruins of the fire. At that time the fire was out entirely and the firemen had quit work. The greatest interest is manifested in the fate of Rosa Liddie, Mary Burke and Annie Lynch, who are missing, and it is almost certain they have perished in the ruins. All the girls worked on the third floor of the Drehman establishment, and were engaged in assorting rags. It is also reported that Nellie Kelly, aged eighteen, of 114 East Sixth street, is missing. She was working with the other missing girls on the third floor, and is certainly a victim of the fire.

At midnight all doubt as to the loss of life in the fire was dissipated. Four more employes of Drehman & Co. are missing from their homes. The corrected list is: Mary Burke, Bessie Brady, Fritz Huber, Nellie Kelly, Maggie Lee, Rosa O'Connell, Mary Lynch, Mary Glascheen, Mary Lee.

DROWNED IN THE GALE.

A Fishing Schooner, Containing Warren Smith, the Noted Sculler, and All His Comrades, Goes to the Bottom.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Setr. 6.

Warren Smith, the famous oarsman, and all his comrades in a fishing-schooner, were drowned in the gale of last Thursday. Between forty-five and fifty vessels of the French banking fleet have arrived in the roads of St. Pierre in a shattered condition. Their cable-chains, anchors, batteaus, dories and tiles have all been swept away. The loss of life was very great. One banker, owned by Jaquet Ives, lost six men; Hardy's banker, six; Vincent's, six; Leoni Costi's, four, and the remainder of the fleet, with few exceptions, two or three each.

Vourdan's banker foundered and sank, but the crew were saved. Over thirty vessels are missing, and grave apprehensions are entertained. The storms were the most violent ever known on the banks. Neither gave any warning, but broke furiously upon the fleet when most of the dories were away overhauling and setting trawls. Not more than half an hour had elapsed from the first indication before the gale and the sea had reached their greatest violence.

The Gloucester schooner W. E. McDonald has arrived here from the Grand Banks towing the dismasted and abandoned Newfoundland banker Mediance. Eight of the crew of this vessel were saved by the Lunenburg schooner that bore up for Halifax. The master, navigator and two men are missing and are supposed to have been lost.

The Nutt-Dukes Murder Trial Postponed.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 6.

The Chronicle's Uniontown special says the petition of the defense for postponement of the Nutt trial was heard in court the first thing Wednesday morning. Dr. A. P. Bowie was present and testified that Breckenridge was confined to his bed with typhoid fever and would not be able to testify this week. The court admitted this was sufficient so far as Breckenridge not being able to be present was concerned, and stated the question was whether the defense regarded his testimony as necessary to their case, and were unwilling to let the trial go on. The defense alleged that Breckenridge was one of the chief witnesses and the petition was granted, the case being continued to the December term. The Grand Jury Wednesday found a true bill against James Nutt for killing N. L. Dukes.

A Tramp's Dastardly Act.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.

A collision occurred Monday night on the Delaware Railroad, near Green Spring, caused by a runaway locomotive from Clayton, which was started by a tramp who was seen to board it and then jump off. The south-bound passenger train, which was running fast, met the locomotive and both engines were wrecked. William Collins, the fireman, was badly scalded, and several passengers received trifling injuries.

Saloon-Keepers Triumph in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.

In the Court of Criminal Correction Wednesday, over eight hundred cases against saloon-keepers for selling beer on Sunday were nolle prossed on the suggestion of the court. This ends, for the present, the fight against the saloon-keepers, and is a triumph for them. This action was taken in view of Judge Noonan's recent decision.

Watchman Killed by Burglars.

BATH, Me., Sept. 5.

Night-watchman Wm. Lawrence was shot and killed Monday night by one of three burglars whom he detected breaking into a grocery store. The burglars fled, but one man has since been arrested on suspicion.

This letter is accompanied with a frantic appeal for help in behalf of an orphan asylum. The gambling operation by which it is to be helped is under the patronage of the Right Rev. Dr. Lynch, Coadjutor Bishop of Kildare.

We take this method of informing Dr. Lynch and Mrs. Mary Stanley, that by the laws of our country and, as we believe, by the law of God, such business is criminal; the mails are not to be used for the promotion of the evil traffic, and public opinion does not sustain ministers and women in its pursuit. We decline buying any of their tickets.—New York Observer.

THE COMMERCIAL.

Good Will to Man—Onward and Upward.

The man who prays and don't vote is a poor specimen of a christian.

Br. Kittridge of the Register starts out handsomely. We wish him every kind of good success.

Col. Fred Morley an adept in conducting Daily newspapers, has the management now of the Post and Tribune.

Wonder if Gov. Begole did accept a $1000,00 pass? Won't do Governor, preaching and practice should go together.

All observers, except the party politicians, (who so blind as those who won't see?) perceive that the dominant political parties are in desperate straits.

The great endeavor of the democratic party has been for the last forty years to eliminate conscience from politics. Shall the republican party in its treatment of the temperance question follow its miserable example?

The colored people are agitating the question of holding a state convention to talk over matters that concern their best interests in the state. The Plain Dealer, the organ of the colored people of Michigan advocates the project. Go ahead, gentlemen.

It does beat all what a blundering mess the Democratic party is making. In this state and every other state their officials and leaders have been on the blunder until from the most halcyon prospects last fall they don't seem to have a ghost of a chance left. In bad shape for 1884.

The idea that the Democrats of Iowa are going to carry that state reminds the Iowa State Register of the story of the small boy and his first fish:

"Oh, father,' he screamed, rushing in in ecstasy, "I caught the biggest fish ever was. He bit right on to my hook." "But where is the fish, my child?" "Oh, pa, he just unbit again and div!"

THE NEW DAILY DETROIT EVENING JOURNAL.

This promised paper bloomed last Saturday. It came in the usual way of a new paper, considerable blowing of trumpets, creating a curiosity to see the initial number. It is a neat seven column paper, a clean artistic look. It has a liberal amount of the Brezee (breeze) in its make up and spicy way of putting things. Evidently the child of the Publisher of "chaff." It proposes clean journalism, which is greatly demanded on the part of a healthy public sentiment.

Harry Hunter, a notorious thief and pickpocket, was arrested at Kalamazoo during the recent horse fair and after examination by Justice Burke he was held for trial under bonds fixed at $3,000. It is said that Hunter had often been caught but always managed to get away. His bail was purposely fixed so that it would be difficult for him to get bail and would secure his appearance in court. Hunter's attorneys applied to Judge Sherwood, the fusion member of the State Supreme Court, for a reduction of the bail, and Sherwood did reduce it to $1,000. Upon this the Kalamazoo Telegraph says: "He exercised what is deemed by some attorneys a questionable authority. He took the case out of the hands of the proper officer who was here to attend to it—he condemned the action of Justice Burke who, with full knowledge of the dangerous character of the man and of his crimes, placed the bail at such a figure as it was thought would for a while, at least, protect the public from the great depredations, and in effect he opened the prison door and let him go free." The Allegan Gazette adds: "No better work could reasonably have been expected of Mr. Sherwood. He is of class which usually reaches the front when such movements as that which caused his election are successful. And why need the Telegraph grieve so deeply? Had Hunter been convicted and sent to jail, ten to one Begole would have pardoned him within six months. Between these two Greenback officials, Michigan is likely to become the paradise of criminals."—Coldwater Republican.

We of Washtenaw cannot complain when a judge of the Supreme Court lets off a criminal amenable to our courts and one of the first cut in $1,500.

This crime of perjury in our courts is becoming worse all the time, and it is so common that lately in this state a judge felt called upon in a recent case to compliment the truthfulness of witnesses on both sides for their evident intention to tell the truth regardless of consequences. In some classes of cases perjury is the rule, and honest evidence the exception.

MODERN PREACHING AND WHAT IS NEEDED TO MAKE IT MORE EFFICIENT.

That a large number of our population are absent from our sanctuaries is patent. Probably the crying sin is less in Ypsilanti than the great majority of communities in this state. The last two years there has been an increase in the attendance in this city from 20 to 25 per cent., and still there is room. Some say that it is the fault of the houses of worship, build a grand house one fitted with all the most fashionable equipments and the people will fill it.

But those who have tried the experiment are sadly disappointed. It don't bring the rich, who have no heart in religious worship, but drives away the poor, who cannot dress in accordance with the surroundings, and yet this fact is no argument against building capacious and neat houses in which to worship God. The N. Y. Observer has an article in point on this question as relates to the pulpit part. The pulpit, consecrated, fired with heavenly zeal and studying the best methods in manner and address to reach the people will draw them, whether it be in a barn, a tent, a plain or an elegant church building.

The decay of church-going, and the limited attendance where there has been no decay, is to be accounted for on various grounds.

One plainly is, that the church, service, and especially the sermon, is not as notable a feature in men's lives as it was before these days when "many run to and fro, and knowledge is increased." Even in the country, the newspaper, the post-office, the telegraph, the cheap publications, the circulating library, are not only supplying demands for which people once looked largely to the pulpit, but are a serious diversion from the ministrations of the sanctuary. And as to evening service, that is rapidly becoming something "which decayeth and waxeth old, and is ready to vanish away." In other words, the pulpit has been robbed of one of its chief elements of extraneous attraction—as a mental stimulus, and a more or less novel and exciting episode in an isolated and uneventful life. So that we may rather wonder that church-going retains as general a hold upon the people as it does.

Another clew is to be found in the lack in so many instances, of an attractive pulpit manner. Since the people have come into possession of so much reading matter, in daily and weekly newspapers, magazines, cheap books of every sort, the distinctive charm and power of oral instruction must be found in the magnetism and vigor of the speaker's personality. If the manner of his delivery adds no emphasis and imparts no vitality to the written matter, if his presence and countenance and voice, his earnestness and sympathy, are not a commentary and an illumination to the words he utters, he is at a sad disadvantage. The truth is hindered and marred, rather than helped and glorified, by passing through his lips; and it makes the draft and strain upon the purely spiritual appreciation of the hearer unduly great.

Too much of the preaching, also, has a certain far-away aspect and sound to the plain man, who comes in from a week's "knocking about" in the world. The atmosphere of the University and the Theological School, the essayist form of the sermon, not to speak of its too frequent nervelessness and lack of muscular grip—removes it into a region outside of men's sympathies, intellectual or spiritual. They are not made to feel the reality to themselves of those things which the service represents, and either stay away or become listless hearers. We want more preachers who, metaphorically speaking, take off their coats,—at least, who bring the gospel home to the man of to-day as the preacher of the Jordan and his Master, the Prophet of Nazareth, did in their day—and we may be sure that "the common people" will "hear them gladly." We have sufficient indication of this in the marvellous success of such unconventional preachers as Spurgeon and Moody. Many cultivated, thoughtful Christians may not feel the need of such ministrations; they may even criticise the multitudes who throng to the campgrounds in summer and to the evangelistic services in winter; and who listen with wrapt attention to such men as speak even in the simplest language directly to the hearts of men, and in the spirit of the great themes on which they dwell. But we shall not remedy the famine of hearers from which the church is suffering, unless we learn their secret of breaking up and cultivating the fallow field of the human heart. Another preacher is earnest and good, but he is supernaturally monotonous. I suppose that spiritual men take no notice of monotony, but I am sure that carnal men do; and they carefully get out of the way of Mr. Dronish." Simplicity in preaching the gospel must be aimed at. "Crumble down the bread," says Mr. Spurgeon, in his characteristic way, "when you serve it out to the children. Break the loaves and fishes for the multitude. The common people like to hear that which their minds can grasp, but they shun the jargon of the schools." To make the gospel interesting it must be abundantly illustrated. Under this head Mr. Spurgeon tells a capital story, and makes some pertinent remarks. "The three reasons," he says, "which a good woman presented for objecting to a preacher were striking ones. She said that in the first place he read his sermon; in the second, he did not read it well, and in the third place it was not worth reading." Did you ever notice a secondary definition of a preacher which is given by Walker?—it runs thus: "One who is apt to harangue tediously in discourse." Never come under the lash of that definition. Gain the attention, fix it, rivet it, fascinate it. Centre your whole mind upon the mastering of other minds with your subject. Feed the sheep: feed the lambs. Make yourself understood by children; for if you are an interesting preacher to children you are an interesting preacher to everybody." Lastly, there must be real earnestness in the pulpit. "Nothing," says Mr. Spurgeon—and the soundness of the advice has been abundantly proved by his own career—"attracts all eyes like fire. Flame with zeal and you will soon be known. Whether he uses copious illustration or not, if a man is in downright earnest he will win attention, and secure an audience."

APPLETON'S GREAT CYCLOPÆDIA.

A library in itself. The thoughts of Five Hundred of the Best Scholars of this and other countries crystalized, boiled down ready for use.

It sheds glory and honor over every household. The family living without it is sadly deficient. They are without one of the wells of comfort that serve to slake the thirst of humanity.

Centuries ago, in the stone or bronze age, when the world was in long clothes, and its intellectual progress of necessity slow, the inhabitants of our or any other country might have compiled a Cyclopedia that would have served for one generation at least, or the aged mound builder might even perhaps have lain down to his ashy bed feeling satisfied that the Cyclopedia conferred upon his tribe would remain ample authority upon all questions of interest, save birth and death, until the extinction of the tribe. Not so to-day. In the mad whirl of the present century, events so rapidly, inventions and discoveries are so many and important, scientific researches so deep and inquisitive that a Cyclopedia that is issued for all time soon becomes obsolete. This difficulty is obviated in the case of Appleton's Cyclopedia. They issue each year an additional volume. In them are chronicled with remarkable fullness and accuracy the doings of the world in that year, so that the man that has Appleton is always abreast of the world. No one has any fresher intelligence, and few men have occasion to purchase a new Cyclopedia.

To praise this standard and well known work would be somewhat like praising the wheat crop or summer weather or any other good thing that comes as a product of the forces of nature. It has been so long the standard of America that we take it as we do coffee for breakfast. It ought to be in every gentleman's library and on every reference table. A public library without Appleton's Cyclopedia would be as impossible as an old maid tea party without gossip. The terms upon which you can get this great work are so easy that it is within the reach of almost every person. The entire work, twenty-four volumes, comes to you within five days after giving the order. No interest, no note, nothing that can in any way disturb your finances. It would seem that after subscribing for your home newspaper your next duty will be to subscribe for Appleton.

J. H. Slipper is the general manager for this and adjoining county. He will furnish you the work complete in 24 volumes within a few days after giving the order, and will ask you to pay for two volumes. Once a month somebody will ask you to pay for one, thus giving you two whole years to pay for the work which is in your possession all the time. You can never get the work in the book stores; it is sold only by agents. The time to get it is now; the drain upon your purse is so small and the intervals so long that you will hardly be conscious of having parted with any money.

If Mr. Slipper should fail to call and see you, you will please send him a postal expressive of your wishes and he will gladly wait upon you. He can be found at the Hawkins House, Ypsilanti.

The disordered condition of the markets which strikes one man who has been using other people's money strikes others guilty of like illegal practices at the same time, and exposures growing out of the same cause, startle people because the number of defalcations are grouped in point of time, and many come to believe that crimes are epidemic. For public security some means wiser and more effective than any now in use should be devised to check the mania for speculating on other people's money.—Post and Tribune.

The true way to have a good time and a happy and prosperous life, is to love and obey God.

THE SECRET.

Great extravagance in living, in food and drink, dress, equipage and pleasures—has consumed a considerable part of the Nation's earnings. Some of the people have been eating and drinking, spending and wasting all that we had to spare, and others have been building railroads at the same time, and they imagined with the same money. The net result is debt.

The interesting little boy who wanted to eat his cake and have it too was never able to manage it, and the children of a larger growth who call themselves the Nation do find and will find the same dificulty. To make the nature of that difficulty clear we have only to remember that the country has to supply all its needs and wants with a certain number of days' labor; for illustration we may suppose that it spends out of every ten days five for food, three for clothing and shelter, and one for pleasure, leaving one for savings. Now, if we eat and drink more, so that it takes six days' work to supply those wants, and if we also dress and live more extravagantly so that the cost is four days labor, and then spend two days' labor in building more railroads, we shall run into debt before the year ends. In exactly this way we have been running behind, and large failures are the consequence.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Detroit saloon-keepers and liquor dealers' association held the long-threatened pic-nic on Sunday last. As though it was not degrading enough to be engaged in a business, the results of which are only degradation and ruin they must complete the detestation in which they are held by every well wisher of humanity by trampling on all the sanctities of the Sabbath. —Michigan Christian Herald.

No Grease for Him.

"When Greece her knees—Greece her knees—Greece her knees," stammered an embarrased schoolboy, forgetting the next line of his recitation. "There's no occasion to grease anybody's knees," shouted his teacher. "Go and study your piece." Neither is there occasion to grease your hair. Parkers Hair Balsam is all the dressing you want. Restores the original gloss and color to gray or faded hair. Does not soil the linen; not a dye; good for the scalp; prevents falling out. sept

Sorrows are our best educators. A man can see farther through a tear than a telescope.

A large and somewhat dilapidated trunk passed through the city this morning form Chicago, bearing the following inscription, which tells its own tale: "In God we trusted; in Dakota we busted."—Grand Rapids Times. No doubt there is more truth than reverence.

Dr. John B. Sawyers, Iuka, Miss., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters give general satisfaction."

Dr. Lorenzo Von Noodt, Ludington, Mich., says: "I feel it my duty to recommend Brown's Iron Bitters for delicate females, and children's complaints."

From the Democrat.

Three years ago a young man came to this state from Sandusky, Ohio, and located in the village of Chelsea, went into business and was doing well, but in an evil hour he took to drinking; had to sell out; went on a farm, and only a day or two ago he was an inmate of the lockup there, paid his fine and departed for home, a sadder if not a wiser man. Yet why publish this—it will be no warning to the rest that are on the downward track.

From the Argus.

A cartoon hangs in the county clerk's office representing Indian agent Allen, wrapped in an Indian blanket and sitting on a bank, waiting for his usual apparel dangling from a clothes line, to dry. The water-logged vessel in which he came so near losing his life, is anchored in the distance. In front of him, are copies of 4th of July orations, speeches, etc.

Joel Hamilton has brought suit against Dr. Frothingham, claiming damages in $2,000. Negotiating a sale for $9,000. Joe naturally want his commission, which the late proprietor refuses to pay, though upon what grounds we can not say.

Ann Arbor Courier.

Rice A. Beal and wife, after visiting friends in Rochester, N. Y., arrived at Saratoga Springs Tuesday evening. They will remain there this week, leaving for Boston next week, J. E. Beal, editor of this paper, will accompany them.

Hampton, ex-night clerk at the St. James has made quite a record since Monday of last week when he left with $55 belonging to the hotel. In the course of his changes he met at Flint a Mr. French traveling for a Detroit paper house. On invitation of Mr. F., Hampton slept with him and appropriated some time in the night $140, placed under his friend's pillow. Mr. French succeeded in lodging Hampton in the Flint Jail, and Sheriff Wallace receiving notice of it Sunday night went to Flint the next morning. He is unable, however, to secure his prisoner untill action on the other matter is taken. Hampton met a lawyer in Lapeer whom he left $100, with to defend him. To a lawyer in Flint he had given for the same purpose an order for a gold watch and chain he had. We are told that another name of Hampton is Harry Sheldon, and that he is the adopted son of a minister near Clio. It is said that Hampton has spent fourteen years of his life in prison up to this time. Incidentally we might say that Sheriff Wallace found the photographs of four young ladies of Ann Arbor in Mr. H.'s valise. We understand that Hampton is wanted on various charges at different points, so that he'll probably get quite a "send off" all told.

THE DETROIT ART EXPOSITION.

AN ADMIRABLE BUILDING AND A MAGNIFICENT ART EXPOSITION.

The Detroit Art Loan Exhibition, opened September 1st, promises to exceed the most sanguine expectations of the projectors, both as to size and quality, numbering over four thousand exhibits, one thousand of which are paintings by the best living artists or original and valuable copies of the old masters.

The building is of brick, 135x153, and has eighteen exhibition rooms, beside the necessary offices, etc.

The ground plan herewith will measurably show the scope of this ambitious enterprise.

It is impossible to give briefly an adequate idea of the details of the exhibition; as a help, however, to the proper understanding of the same, it will be well to know that each of the twelve smaller rooms, 30x30, will be as large as any part in the Louisville Art Exhibition, the latter having but four all told.

Several of these in the Detroit Art Loan are occupied by single exhibitors, whose collections, in some cases, will be of at least $150,000 in value. Such citizens of Detroit as the Hon. James F. Joy, General R. A. Alger, Senator Palmer, Mr. James McMillan, together with Mr. Hurlburt of Cleveland, and many of his friends, are fully identified with the work, and their choicest treasures will be placed on exhibition. Among the articles of special interest will be a fine painting sent as a gift from Pope Leo XIII, at Rome, with his blessing upon it and the Loan, a bit of gold and silver embroidery once belonging to Queen Elizabeth, antique bronzes from Commander Goringe, who brought the obelisk to New York, and Cyprian antiquities from General de Cesnola, many elegant silk textile fabrics, costly laces, curious almost without number, exquisite etchings and water colors (a room full of each); more than twenty fine marble statues form a single feature of the exhibit.

The various Railroad and Stemboat Lines have decided upon offering Excursion Tickets at extremely low rates.

No. Sir!

A Scotch minister once said no woman could stand pain as well as a man. That is not so. The fact is generally the other way. Mrs. Edward Myers, of Rondout, N. Y., submitted to the operation of the removal of her hand by amputation, without taking ether, or moving a muscle, or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy, also of Rondout, N. Y., who performed the operation, said he never saw such heroism. The lady's disease was Erysipelas, and afterward the Doctor gave his "Favorite Remedy" to cleanse the Blood. Mrs. Myers is now well and strong.

The Chicago Journal pays a high compliment to the enterprising advertising agency of Messrs. Lord & Thomas in that city. In fourteen years they have from a small beginning made their agency one of the largest, as it is one of the most reliable in the country. They have secured this growth by careful attention to the business entrusted to their hands, and to their accurate knowledge of the ways by, and the mediums through which to reach any particular class to which an advertiser may wish to cater. The junior member of this firm, Mr. Ambrose Thomas, is a Boston boy, a graduate of the Traveler counting room, and he has many friends there who will be glad to learn of his prosperity.—Boston Traveler.

Mr. George C. Dennis, Rochester, says: "I have sold Brown's Iron Bitters for over six months, and find it gives entire satisfaction."

A clergyman, beloved by his people, was called to a chair in one of our theological seminaries a few years ago, and accepted the call. He prepared his resignation and took it to church one Sunday, intending to read it after the notices, but, the thought occuring to him that it might draw the attention of the audience from the sermon, he decided to defer its reading until later in the service. Having finished his discourse, he presented the resignation, and then turned to the hymn, which had hardly gained in appropriateness by the change; for it began:

"What cheering words are these,
Their sweetness who can tell."

Thirteen Years' Dyspepsia.

"I suffered with dyspepsia for 13 years." writes John Albright Esq., of Columbus, Ohio. "Samaritan Nervine cured me." As it always cures such disorders. Get it at the druggist.

"Stop the press," yelled the country editor to the consolidated devil, compositor and pressman, who had just started on his pile of three hundred blank sheets, "here's a man who's come a mile and a quarter to subscribe for the paper and brung his turnips in advance, and I want to give him a personal."—Toledo American.

Mrs. George Nelson, REESE, MICH., says: "I think Brown's Iron Bitters is a splendid medicine."

Instantly Relieved.

Mrs. Ann Lacour of New Orleans, La., writes:—I have a son who has been sick for two years; he has been attended by our leading physicians but all to no purpose. This morning he had his usual spell of coughing, and was so greatly prostrated in consequence, that death seemed imminent. We had in the house a bottle of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM for the LUNGS purchased by my husband, who noticed your advertisment yesterday. We administered it according to directions and he was instantly relieved.

A GAME OF CHESS.

Yes, I love her most madly, but she shall not guess
The state of my heart, while we calmly play chess.
That she is my angel, she knows not nor cares,
As she opens the game with king's pawn two squares.
And I answer themove in the usual way,
Not caring a straw to win in the play;
But thinking the rather how charming her look,
As she lays that deep scheme and captures my rook;
She bends her fair head so it catches the light,
And her hands are so pretty, so soft, and so white,
But what, she is blushing!—her play, too, has erred;
For I've taken her queen with queen's knight to his third.
It must be she feels my unmannerly stare,
Or knows from my play that my mind is not there.
But we move still more wildly—I hardly can say
Whether white men or red are mine in the fray;
And, indeed, I can't help it, but, silent no more,
I'll tell her at once that her I adore.

* * * * * * *

That was long, long ago; and now, o'er our game
We bend, as of old, but with feelings more tame;
Yet, no matter what years to our lives may be fated,
We'll forget not the game when both players were mated.

VIOLA ——;

—OR—

Thrice Lost in a Struggle for a Name.

BY MRS. R. B. EDSON.

"Woman!" he cried, sternly, "it is your weakness that has encouraged him. You never enforced obedience. You always let him have his own head, and this is the result of your criminal folly."

"O Ben! I tried to do the best I could," she answered, meekly, never hinting by word or tone that there could be any possibility of his having ever been to blame.

He groped for a chair and sank into it heavily. With a woman's natural instinct, Myra Anderson put aside her own pain and tried to comfort him. She knew that his pride and temper were wounded, and so she said little, only dropping a word now and then with rare tact, making it always as favorable for her boy as she dared.

No one said much to Ben Anderson about his boy; they soon learned by the look in his face that it was not best. Only Tom Arnold told him that "in his opinion, no man had a right to set up his wishes against nature, and a man forced to take up a life against strong, repellant instincts, generally made a failure of it."

The summer grew bright, as so many summers had done before, but something dimmed its splendor, and cast a faint shadow over all the earth and air. The days were so long and the nights so lonely at the pleasant prairie home, that Myra Anderson got nervous over their slow, monotonous length. But by-and-by letters came from Ralph—gay, bright little letters, full of buoyant life, ardent anticipations and eager ambitions, with here and there little sudden veins of deep tenderness, that brought the blood to Myra Anderson's face with a quick, warm glow. But he said nothing. He listened to the letters with a white, immovable face, still very set and stern, whenever Ralph's name was mentioned. Very evidently he had not yet forgiven him.

But one day a rumor was mentioned in the newspapers that there had been a terrible gale on the South Atlantic coast, and a list of the vessels supposed to be lost was given, and among them the "North Star"—his ship. Ben Anderson heard it in the city. How he got home he never knew; he had no recollection of a step of the way. He walked into the room where his wife sat reading over some letters, a faint smile on her lips. She hid them hastily in her dress, blushing softly. But he did not see; he walked straight to the table and sat down, and buried his face in his hands.

"God in Heaven, have mercy!" broke in a sudden, agonized cry from his lips, the great drops of sweat coming out on his forehead like glistening beads.

"Ben! O my husband—what—what?" she stopped, half paralyzed with alarm and dread as a terrible, wild thought came crashing through her brain.

He pushed the crushed paper toward her—he had brought it all the way from Rockford crushed in his hand—and then broke into a fierce, wild storm of passionate weeping. Myra Anderson was nearly wild with terror. Never, even when their baby had died, had she seen her husband weep. It is something terrible when a strong man gives way to tears. A woman weeps softly and naturally, but when the depths of a strong, stern, rugged man's nature are broken up, it is like the fierce passion of the tornado in its intensity.

"He has punished me for my hardness—I wouldn't forgive him," he said, after he had grown calmer and they had talked it over. "O Ralph, my son! my son!"

Did you ever think what strange ways God takes to break down these stubborn wills of ours? How, when love and tenderness fail, He sends the tempest's breath and the terrible, swift sword, to do His will; and then when our hearts are softened and broken, how tenderly He turns about and drops some great gift or joy into our lives?

He did this into Ben Anderson's in this way:

Four weeks after that terrible rumor, came a letter from Ralph! There had been a terrible storm, he wrote, but they were in port at the time. Half a score of vessels went down, among them the "North State," of New York.

CHAPTER VI.

Time, which never stands still or waits, has dropped six more years into the bosom of eternity. I want you to step with me a moment into the home of the Andersons. There has been some change since we saw it last. There are evidences of prosperity, both externally and internally. The old ambition of Myra Anderson in regard to "stuffed furniture," has been realized, and she no longer scours, as of old, the floor of her kitchen, where a pretty oil carpet reigns just now in suspicious newness. Here and there about the house are odd bits of curious bijouterie, and rare shells, and two or three pretty, foreign looking paintings in curiously carved frames, and a pretty little oval stand of brilliant mosaic; but the dearest and most beautiful thing of all in the eyes of Ben Anderson and his wife, is the picture of a handsome young fellow, in a rosewood and gilt frame, hanging over the mantel in the sitting-room. There is a broad sailor's collar turned away from the finely-turned, sinewy throat, and a loosely knotted handkerchief falling over the full chest. The heavy chestnut hair is thrown carelessly back from a broad, open forehead, as fair and white as a girl's. Taken altogether, there is something both winning and inspiring in the fresh, resolute face, and a stranger would instinctively feel drawn toward it. Is it any wonder then that Myra Anderson stopped every few minutes as she bustled about the pleasant, sunshiny room, and looked up at the picture, and wondered for the nine hundred and ninety-ninth time if he had changed much in these two years, and how her boy—he would always be a boy to her—would look with a beard, as he had written her he wore one now. She tried to fancy how he would look, and smiled softly to herself as she went about putting little touches here and there, that it might look pleasant and attractive to him, for he was to be there that noon—that very noon, she said over and over, in a little tumult of joyous delight.

Ralph had been home twice since he went away, for a little brief visit, but now he was coming home to stay all winter, and it seemed to the fond, happy mother that there was a new heaven and a new earth—everything was so beautiful and full of sweet peace. And then there was another thing: Ralph was coming home Captain—Captain Ralph Anderson!

Ben said "pshaw!" when she said the name over with its new title, but a faint color crept into his bronzed face, and a sudden light flamed in his grave eyes.

"Do you think we have changed much, Ben?" she asked, a little anxiously. "I mean so as to look strange to him."

"You haven't, Myra. You look as fresh as a girl, despite your forty-five years," he said, looking earnestly into the bright, excited face, which flushed like a girl's at the words of praise.

The lovely October air came in at the open door and lifted the iron-gray hair of Ben Anderson, and crept with a little shiver of delight through the fragrant geranium leaves in the window, and just touched, with careful fingers, the scented petals of the great creamy and pink roses on the mantel. Blanche Arnold had sent those over that morning from her father's conservatory.

Was there ever, I wonder, such an October day before?

"Where through a sapphire sea the sun
Sailed like a golden galleon!"

All the long line of faintly indulating hills were cradled in golden mists. Far away the river glowed like a pale opal, and the city roofs and spires were faintly visible against the far-off amber blue skies.

At just twelve o'clock our old friend Ned Bradlee drove up to Ben Anderson's door with a pretty bran new buggy, bought especially for the occasion, and a lovely little span of chestnut colts driven tandem.

"I think, perhaps, I had better introduce you to Ned, for I have no idea you would know him if I didn't. The lank, light hair has been cropped and brushed up over his ease, (instead of straight behind them, as formerly,) and something—perhaps a change in climate—has changed the color from a pale sand color to a very lovely auburn-brown. The face is as fresh and fair as it was eight years ago, and you look in vain for a single place where the "pencil of Time" has made so much as a single comma. He is a little stouter, and, to tell the truth, a little handsomer. He is dressed, too! I doubt if ever the sun reflected in a glossier beaver, or a more brilliant pair of boots; and I most know there was never such loves of trousers sported even on Broadway. Now, please don't guess that there was "a woman in the case," because by and by, when I get an opportunity, I want to tell you about it, and nothing in the world vexes me so as to find myself forestalled when I am intending to tell a secret.

Ned Bradlee had begged the opportunity of driving to the depot to meet Ralph, and Ben Anderson had consented, partly to please his old friend, and partly because he didn't care to have stranger eyes looking on when he met his boy.

"Well, I declare, Mrs. Anderson! You don't look more'n sixteen, and your cheeks are like piny's," he cried, making an awkward attempt to raise his beaver, as she came to the door. "What will the Capting say?"

"You won't stop to talk, will you, Ned, but drive right home as soon as the train gets in?" she said, eagerly, without noticing his salutation save by a heightened color.

"I'll be back by half-past one if the world stands; have a nice lot of dinner, 'cos you may have company; there's no knowin'. Any wants in town?"

"No, no!"

He made a feint of laughing at her eager impatience, but his voice had an odd, husky sound in it, altogether unusual.

How slow the hands moved over the dial! How many times, even before one o'clock, she went and stood in the south door, and looked off over the long prairie road, shading her eyes with her hand, and smiling softly to herself. And when at last, five minutes before the time, through the faint cloud of dust she saw a light carriage, with a pair of horses tandem, and saw there were two in it, how wildly her heart beat! And then her eyes grew suddenly misty. There was a little whirl of swift wheels, and like one in a blissful dream, she saw a form spring to the ground, and a moment more and she was crying in the arms of a tall, broad-chested, handsome man, who kissed her over and over, while at the same moment he shook hands with his father, and laughed happily, despite the tears in his handsome blue eyes.

"Ef I'd thought you would feel so sorry, and take on so, Mrs. Anderson, I'll be darned ef I'd brought the Capting here at all!" Ned exclaimed, blowing his nose vigorously.

"The same silly old dog," Ralph said, laughing. "Mother, what has come over Ned? He looks as if he had been made over new. I'll bet he's got a girl."

To Ralph's surprise the ruddy face grew several shades deeper. "What," he cried, "did that shot hit?"

"Never you mind, Capting," Ned replied, trying to look at ease, but still blushing like an Indian summer sunset.

Then the dinner was served—and such a dinner as it was! There was the nicest of salmon trout, which Ben Anderson had rode to the city before sunrise to get; and chicken in pies, and stews, and roasts; and just the loveliest little pig, roasted whole, lying on his side in a great white platter with a bright blue edge, and looking ready to burst with happiness and pride that he, of all his mother's little snow-white, pink-nosed children, should have the honor to be eaten on this great occasion. And then the gravies and sauces and vegetables! And then, again, the pies and puddings—why! if I were to tell them all it would take me half a day! Only this I will say: I don't believe there was ever before such a wonderful dinner, or ever quite such a happy, happy party as sat before it. And I am quite as sure, by the admiring look in her eyes, that Myra Anderson thought there was not another mother in the wide world that had such a boy as hers!

I feel as if I ought to beg the reader's pardon for not before introducing him to the Montfords, of Montford House. The more so because they are the only "quality," par excellence, which the region round about could boast. Let me make haste to atone for my neglect, without a moment's delay.

First, then, there was Gilbert Montford, an English gentleman of great wealth, and the very bluest of blood. There was, next in order of importance, his agent, and confidential friend, Mr. Alfred De Vries, who had been born and educated in Paris. Then there were three children—or rather, they were children once. Just at this time they were respectively twenty-six, twenty-four and twenty. Miss Althea Montford being the eldest, her sister Fannie next, and Victor, the brother, who was, as I just said, twenty.

Mr. Montford had been in the State something like nine years. He had one of the finest establishments in the country. Montford House was a sort of marvel to the simple republicans of the surrounding country. There were massive pieces of silver, which had been handed down for generations, some of it bearing heraldic devices which showed the greatness of its possessors. The Montford servants wore livery, and the Montford crest—a rampant lion with an uplifted arm above it—was emblazoned on the panels of the family carriages. Altogether they were a very high-born, aristocratic family, with plenty of money, apparently, and, as a consequence, plenty of admirers.

If they were a little select in their associates no one thought of it with the feeling of indignation or annoyance with which they regarded the aristocratic pretensions of Jenkins Stubbs, Esq., whose father used to saw wood for a rather scanty living. Mr. Montford was to the manor born, and the descendant of lords and noblemen had something to be proud of; for, say what we will, family and position are something, and Americans have a due respect for "the nobility."

Among the privileged visitors at the Montford House was Blanche Arnold. She had been intimate with the Montford young ladies ever since they came to the neighborhood. They were somewhat older than her, but Blanche was always mature and womanly, even when a small child, and so the difference in ages was not noticeable. Some people prophesied that she would marry Victor some day. She was nearly a year the oldest, but that was nothing where one had the grace and beauty and accomplishments that Miss Arnold possessed. It was very evident, also, that young Montford was very much interested in the young lady, and certainly it would be a good thing for her, who was, after all only the daughter of a simple American citizen.

If Blanche Arnold had been beautiful as a child, she was regal, as a woman. Despite his added years and experience, Ralph was still a little afraid of her. She could still make him stammer and blush by one of her wonderful glances, and the touch of her white, velvet soft fingers, made him catch his breath with a sensation of being smothered in rose leaves.

Ralph was not a vain fellow, by any means, but he could not be quite blind to the admiration expressed in his cousin's shy, soft glances, half hidden by the drooping lashes which veiled their soft fire.

Perhaps it showed Miss Blanche Arnold's good taste—I think it did. Ralph Anderson was worthy of any woman's admiration, either mentally or physically. He had the resolute integrity and the unswerving loyalty to principle which characterized his Puritan ancestors, to which was added a broader faith and a more generous spirit. He was besides brave, resolute, ambitious and fearless; and yet withal tender and gentle of heart as a woman, sometimes. He was just the sort of fellow to win a woman's admiration, when to all this was added a handsome face, and a fine physique.

He had been at home a week when Blanche rode out one morning with an invitation for him to call at Montford House. The young ladies had been very anxious she should bring him, "they had, somehow, got an impression that he was something quite wonderful."

She just lifted her eyes, and dropped them hastily, but the look in them, and the faint flush that stained her cheek, gave a very pretty solution as to the agency by which they came to have such an impression. What young man of twenty-three, with blood in his veins, would have refused the invitation, prefaced by so delicate a compliment from such a pretty woman? I should be quite ashamed of my hero if he had manifested such a fearful lack of gallantry; but I am happy to record that he did not.

It was a clear, crisp, frosty morning, and the prairies glittered in the sun like frosted emeralds. The cool air brought a faint rose-red to Blanche Arnold's creamy cheek, and the wonderful gray eyes, with their changeful expression, sparkled and gleamed in the most bewildering way as they glanced, and drooped, and wavered, and said the most unutterable things that one pair of pretty eyes ever said.

They did not go direct to Montford House—it was early to call—but drove off across the prairie and down the river road, and Ralph, looking in the matchless face, under the glamour of those alluring eyes, thought he should be willing to ride on so forever.

But Miss Arnold was possessed of excellent judgment. She knew just how far to excite a sentiment, and have it keen and unsated. So presently she said, looking at her little jeweled watch!

"I promised Althea to be there at eleven, and it lacks but ten minutes—we must hurry; I had no idea it was so late."

Montford House was a large, imposing house, with balconies and verandahs, giving it an air of taste and comfort and elegance. It sat back from the street a little, and was reached by a circular drive-way. A servant stood by the steps to take the horse when they drove up, and a moment more and the door was opened in response to their ring. Blanche raised her train of rustling silk and stepped in past the girl who stood holding open the door, without glancing at her; but Ralph involuntarily raised his eyes to her face—started, colored, and then stopped short and stared at her with all his might.

Blanche dropped the voluminous folds of her dress, gave them a little deft shake, and looked round. Just the faintest possible frown contracted her smooth brow. The girl saw it, and an angry red flamed in her face, whether at the young man's impertinent stare, or the young lady's evident disapproval of it, one couldn't quite tell.

"Blanche, that girl looks as our little Viola did," he said, in a quick under tone, as they followed the girl to the parlor. "I fear I was rude, but I was so startled I forgot myself."

"No great harm done—she is only one of the servants, though a new one, I think," she answered, coolly and indifferently.

Just then they reached the parlor door which the girl opened for Blanche, who was in advance, to enter. There was a little feminine bustle, during which Ralph stole another glance at the girl's face. It was white as if she was dead, and had such a strange look!

Characteristics of a Newfoundland City.

The first impressions of a stranger on arriving at St. John are not of the most agreeable character, especially if he arrives in a drenching shower, and in the midst of it, while walking up a long slip or wooden pier, he is accosted by a custom-house official and requested to go with him into one of the company's sheds and have his baggage examined. Of course it is only a matter of form, but still it is annoying, and the chalk-mark sprawled over your valise or gripsack is merely a symbol of power which both Governments could well dispense with during the summer season. The drive to the hotel is a very hilly one, and you feel grateful when the driver deposits you at the entrance, and you willingly pay him all he asks. The St. John hackman is not of the avaricious class, and for thirty cents he will take you up more steep places and over more stones and through deeper ruts than a Philadelphia Jehu would condescend to for a couple of dollars. There are several first-class hotels here, and they all seem to be well patronized, the latest candidate for public favor being the Hotel Dufferin, on Charlotte street. It is located opposite the King's Park. Opposite the park, adjoining the Court-house, is an old graveyard, in which the bones of some of the first settlers are laid. It, too, is used as a park, for the dead who are here resting, awaiting the sound of the archangel's trumpet, seem to have been forgotten by their descendants. The memorial tablets, granite tombs and iron-ribbed inclosures are tumbling into ruin and decay, and present a very dark side in contrast to the handsomely laid out flower-beds and mounds across the pathway on the left. The inscriptions on some of these old tombstones are as odd as their designs. One tells of a lady who is the wife of a certain individual, but the first name of the husband has been erased by the sculptor's chisel, and a deep groove lets you fill in the name to suit yourself. A little way further on one reads of two boys who were upset in a boat while sailing in the bay, and bears date of nearly a century ago. Another stone tells us of a man who was an esquire, and had served her Majesty in numerous offices with fidelity, etc., etc. This monument is a hollow one, a side of it having fallen in. It remains as it crumpled, no attempt being made to put it in repair. Everywhere decay, both the body and the memorial of it being obliterated, and no "Old Mortality" near to save either from destruction.—Cor. Philadelphia Press.

—A Cleveland man named Jones has a cow addicted to the uncomfortable habit of switching her tail in his face while milking her. The other day Jones took the tail and tied it firmly to his leg. The cow, irritated by the flies she could not drive away, started off, and feeling the curious attachment to her tail became frightened and ran. Jones is now walking about on crutches and remarking: "About the tenth time I had been hauled around that lot I began to see where I missed it. I oughter tied her tail to her leg and not to mine."—Detroit Free Press.

—A proposed remedy for discouraging and separating fighting dogs was tried the other day at Worcester on two Russian bloodhounds, one of which, during the street parade of a traveling show, got off his muzzle and fastened his teeth into the other's neck. Nothing would induce him to let go until a handful of yellow snuff was sprinkled on his nose. This worked like a charm, and with a violent spasm of disgust he abandoned his frugal meal. This remedy might be tried on dueling editors.—Boston Post.

O, for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers!
O, for an iceberg or two at control!
O, for a vale that at midday the dew cumbers!
O, for a pleasure trip up to the pole!
O, for a little one-story thermometer,
With nothing but zeroes all ranged in a row!
O, for a big double-barreled hygrometer,
To measure the moisture that rolls from my brow!
O, that this cold world were twenty times colder!
(That's irony red hot, it seemeth to me,)
O, for a turn of its dreaded cold shoulder!
O, what a comfort an ague would be!
O, for a grotto frost lined and rill riven,
Scooped in the rock under cataract vast!
O, for a winter of discontent even!
O, for wet blankets judiciously cast!
O, for a soda fount spouting up boldly
From every hot lamp-post against the hot sky!
O, for proud maiden to look on me coldly,
Freezing my soul with a glance of her eye!
Then O, for a draft from a cup of cold pizen!
And O, for a through ticket, via Coldegrave,
To the baths of the Styx, where a thick shadow lies on
And deepens the chill on its dark running wave!

A YOUNG WOMAN DETECTIVE.

Peddlers, like horse-jockeys, have a reputation for being tricky and for not remembering the golden rule. At least they are frequently accused of this, but as a tin-peddler of fifty-nine years' standing I deny the charge as applying to peddlers more than to any other class of traders.

Not only do I deny it for myself, but for the majority of the men who are engaged in the business—not including, of course, the many self-styled "agents," those hawkers of patented articles who are found in every State of the Union. But in defense of the old-fashioned tin-peddler, with horse and cart, I pick up the cudgels.

We were as honest as other men! and I wish I could say as much for all the women we have to deal with. Not that I intend to be disrespectful to the ladies, for I always enjoy trading with them. But during the last sixty years I have obtained some very queer glimpses of the workings of the feminine mind when it is intent upon making a bargain.

During the whole of my long career, I can truly say that I was never guilty of but one trick of which I am really ashamed; and in that I was outwitted by a young lady. She came within a hand's turn of sending me to jail. If I had been a handsome young fellow, the case might have been different, or it might not, I cannot say; but she was a young woman of good character, and she was acting in defense of a cause which she believed to be a just one. The story is against me, but I am going to tell it.

To begin with, I was not, in my younger days, a temperance man. I was born in the old Bay State before the temperance movement began. My folks, in common with all other families, always had liquor in the house; and when any of us were not feeling well, or were out in the cold and came home chilled, mother would prepare a a little cup of "toddy" to warm us up and prevent our taking cold.

So I grew up in the belief that it was right to drink liquors now and then. None of our family were drunkards, though I must say that one of the boys came very near to being one. He saw the awful precipice just as he came to it, and stopping short, turned and escaped it. It isn't every one can do that, so don't go too near.

When I began peddling I carried a bottle of "West India" tucked away in my cart. I did not drink, as I have said, to excess, but used perhaps a quart in a month. That was about the kind of person I was then, as regards temperance.

From 1850 to 1858 my "round"—and by round I mean the route over which I sold my goods—lay through a portion of Southern New Hampshire and two of the western counties of Maine. I had not been trading in this section very long, when the Neal Dow temperance crusade began, and the "Maine law," wholly prohibiting the sale of all intoxicating liquors, was enacted. That was a law, too, as many persons well remember, which was supported by a strong and enthusiastic temperance party, a law that had genuine vigor to enforce it.

Then came dry times in Maine. Not a drop of liquor could be had legally for love or money, and diligent search and chase was made for all illicit sellers, and for drinkers, too. You may be sure there was moaning among the steady old topers, and not a little discontent among the moderate drinkers.

I had a great many of both topers and moderate drinkers among the people on my route. Often, with a wistful look, a man would beckon me aside. I knew what to expect. "Haven't got a drop of anything in yer cart, have ye, Mr. K——?"

When I replied no he would turn away in great sadness, or perhaps vigorously berate Neal Dow, or urge me to bring him a "quart" the next time I came from "over Hampshire way."

I sympathized with these thirsty ones, I did not favor the "law," or any sort of prohibitory law then. I looked upon prohibition as a fanatical raid on every man's rights, and hence I had no compunctions in seeing the law evaded or broken.

But the man who broke that law did it at no small peril! The temperance people were alert and merciless. Everywhere the State swarmed with "Watchmen Clubs," "Temperance Bands" and vigilance committees. Not only gentlemen, but often ladies, were on these committees. Some of the women, indeed, were among the most successful of the temperance police.

As I have said, I did not sympathize at all with this anti-rum crusade, and after a year or two I hit on the following ruse for outwitting the "Ramrods"—as the reformers were called by the topers—and of supplying some of my thirsty Maine friends with an occasional dram.

I bought a lot of hard-shelled "cushaws," or crook-necked gourds, as some call them. These I carefully prepared by removing the inside of the gourds through a small hole in the stem end—not neglecting to preserve the stem to be used as a stopper, or rather to be placed over the stopper.

I had a dozen of these hard-shelled gourds. They held from a quart to two quarts each, and the shells, when carefully dried and shellacked, made very good flasks for water, or any other common liquid that might be put in them.

When these were full, sealed up and ornamented with the stems, held in the proper places by glue, they so closely resembled the green gourds that it would have taken a vigilant eye to detect the difference.

These gourds I placed in the bottom of my cart among paper-rags and tag-locks. If any one saw and spoke of them, I replied that it was a lot that I had bought to gratify a whim.

So it came to pass that a select circle of my customers in the Pine-Tree State received from time to time a gourdful of something, which I always noticed they were very anxious about. On returning the gourds to me, they filled them with water or grain of some kind, and carefully restored the stem to its place.

This kind of smuggling went on for a long time without interruption. My customers were not informers, as you may suppose. I felt in no danger of being betrayed by them. They would have lost a hand sooner than given the slightest hint to the "prohibitionists."

Nevertheless, I did not make much money out of the business. It was not done by me for money, nor had I any idea of turning my cart into a traveling rum-shop. I never carried more than the dozen gourds at once, and these more to gratify a little circle of genial old fellows whom I knew, than for any motive of gain.

One day I stopped to trade at a house near the "Corners," in the town of F——, where there had of late been several "rum-cases" tried. There were three or four women at this house, and as usual, they came out to look over my tin-ware, prints and notions in the cart.

Women always will do that, whether they want to buy or not; we expect it. It is one of the things a peddler must accept good-naturedly.

When I first began peddling, this habit of the women made me angry; for I thought they did it to make me work in folding things up and putting them away again. But that is not the reason. They cannot help it; it is natural to them. And they like to see a peddler fold and replace his goods carefully, even if it takes him half an hour.

You would think, perhaps, that they did not care, or realize, how much work they make the trader; but they do, and that is the funniest part of it; and think very much more of you if you have unbounded patience with them.

A bright woman always knows that she has several weaknesses, and she is apt to confide in a man who she sees knows it, and has a heartful of patience for her whims. It took me thirty or forty years to learn even so much of woman nature. I don't pretend to know much about women yet; and, in fact, I never saw the man who did.

As I have said, there were three or four women at the house, one of them a very pretty, blue-eyed young lady about twenty years old, who seemed to be a caller or visitor. She came to the back of the cart with the others, and while peering in, her sharp eyes spied one of the gourds.

"O," said she, "do let me look at that droll, crook-necked squash!" and at once she pulled one of them from under the paper-rags.

It chanced to be one that I had received back from an old customer only the day before, full of barley-corns. He had neglected to glue on the stem as carefully as he should have done. While the young lady was holding it, the stem came off and some of the barley ran out.

That circumstance I might perhaps have explained satisfactorily to her, if nothing else except the barley had run out. But something else, not perceptible to the eye, but appreciable by the nose, also came out of the gourd.

She first sniffed, and then put it to her pretty little nose and sniffed again. Then she gave me a quick little look out of the corners of her blue eyes.

I knew in an instant that I was caught, though she did not say a word for a moment or two, and then only asked me, innocently enough, to be so kind as to sell her one of those droll little gourds.

I tried to plead off. I wanted to carry them all home, I said, which was very true.

But she pouted and seized another one—one of the full ones, too, as it happened—and said that I must, and that I should sell her that one.

I was now in trouble. As coolly as I could, I replied: "No, no; I cannot do it." But she had the gourd in her hand, and I could not very well get it without taking it from her by force, and that I wouldn't do.

She offered me fifty cents, and held on to the gourd. I would not take the money—I knew better than that—but I assured her, since she would have it, that I would make her a present of it.

Finding that she could not get me to take pay for it, she ran into the house, got her hat, and started off with the gourd as fast as she could walk. I also started from that locality at once, and drove as fast as I dared. Still, I hoped that perhaps the girl only wanted the liquor for her folks, or to gratify some whim, though I might have known better.

I had not gone more than three miles from the "Corners," when a wagon in which were three men came driving up behind my cart at a great pace. A constable jumped from the wagon and arrested me for violating the "law."

Well, they soon had me under lock and key; and a search of my cart revealed anything save a good condition of things for me. They captured every gourd—five full ones.

What they did with them I never knew; I know I never saw them again.

At my trial they failed to prove—though my charming young lady acquaintance tried very hard to do so, she being a member of a "Band of Temperance"—that I had actually sold liquor.

There was a great deal of fun and laughter about the gourds, and I barely escaped sentence to jail, but had a fine to pay, and lost about a week's time besides.

That broke up the gourd business. I used sometimes to meet the young lady afterwards, and always lifted my hat to her. I really never felt angry with her.—Youth's Companion.

Since June 1st commercial failures have been unusually numerous and large. The lard failure at Chicago, the failures at Cleveland, Chicago and Pittsburg, in the iron business, some heavy dry goods failures here, and the collapse of F. Shaw & Brothers and of other leather manufacturers and dealers have made a gloomy record for the past two months. Some persons begin to fear that another panic like that of 1873 may be near at hand. The commercial world is subjected to a pressure not unlike that of a period of unusual stringency in the money market, and each failure, as it becomes known, increases the apprehension and the consequent curtailment of loans.—N. Y. Tribune.

HARVEST HOME.

Another summer's glories gone,
The sheaves and shocks are gathered home.
Again we sing the harvest song.

The storms and clouds have cleared away
When farmers run their reapers gay,
Rejoicing every harvest day.

Sweet summer days seem passed so soon,
As we carried sheaves from morn till noon
And in the light of the harvest moon.

The fertile fields are cleared once more,
Workers and eaters sing encore,
The last load's on the old barn floor.

Shout, politicians great and small,
Whatever parties rise or fall,
The farmer's wheat makes bread for all.

FARMER.

Judge Harriman is president of the Ann Arbor School Board.

The Pioneer meeting at Ann Arbor Wednesday was well attended by the old settlers.

When you see a business man absorbed in base ball, billiards, etc., his time is short.

Prof. Lodeman brought with him some fine specimens of Florida lemons, oranges, pine apples, banyans, etc.

A. Miner gives a reason for the paucity of flies this summer, "They have gone into winter quarters."

Sale of seats for the Distillery opera Tuesday Sept. 11, at Dodges. Tickets 35 cts.

One hundred and fifty women voted in Ann Arbor for members of the School Board. Not over a half dozen voted here.

Ex-Soldiers, don't forget the meeting to organize a Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, this evening at Capt. Allen's office.

Ben Joslin received $75.00 for his engagement in Detroit, and is engaged by the Mayor to make several ascensions during the State Fair.

The supply of Librettos to the Distillery is limited and those desiring them should secure them before they are all gone. They can be had at Dodge's, Smith's and Cady's.

The management of the "The Distillery" have decided to play Friday and Saturday nights in place of Saturday afternoon and evening. Reduction will be made for children as if a matinee were held.

At the Ann Arbor School election about 600 votes were cast. The Temperance ticket consisting of Rev. Dr. Hascall, pastor of the Baptist church, Mrs. Bishop and Dr. Wilson had 59 majority. Hurra for Ann Arbor.

Unclaimed Letters Sept. 6th.—Maggie Allen, John Bibbs, Mrs, Fred P. Crockett, Mrs. Martha Cuffman, F. George, Jennie Harris, Mrs. D. Hitchingham, Mrs. A. M. Loud, Charles Mosher, C. M. Smart, Mrs. Fannie B. Reed, Henry Smith, H. C. Temple, Julia Witt.

We are in receipt of a handsome announcement of a school of elocution at Worcester, Mass., conducted by Mrs. Geo. Woodford, formerly Allie Wise. Mrs. Woodford has gained a splendid reputation as an elocutionist.

Prof. Robt. J. Stephen's new opera house band gave the second of their series of open air concerts Saturday evening, according to their previously advertised program of selection admirable and applauded by a large croud that had gathered to hear them.

The Baptist ladies having for the main chance the completion of the new Baptist church have pre-empted the dining hall on the Fair grounds, during the Fair. They bespeak the kindly aid of all who are in sympathy and the liberal patronage of parties from abroad.

Rehearsals for the Distillery are going on finely at the rate of two or three a day. Anxious ma'mas are plying the needle with eager haste, preparing the costumes, so that "she'll look as nice as any of them you know." The properties required to put the opera on in tip top shape are being gathered from all side. The orchestra will consist of twelve pieces all told, and will render selections in both string and brass. The principal characters will be assumed as follows:

McFinley, The Baker,—John Hodge.
Tanglewood, Distiller.—Charlie Salyer.
Cornelius Cobb, Peddler.—W. McAndrew.
Thingabob, A Policeman.—Geo. Fulton.
Pansy, Jessie Cole.
Chlorinda, May Pence
Mrs. Prim, Bell Champion.
Ichabod Craine, Harry VanTuyl.

Miss Carrie Towner goes to her school in Detroit next Monday. Her future pupils will have good reason to rejoice.

Miss. McIntire of Portsmouth, Maine, and Mrs. Hill, of Kittery, Maine, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Williams.

Mr. C. J. Moor the chief assistant in the freight house, has moved his family from Detroit and is a resident of Oak street.

Principal Willets has moved his family from Monroe, taking rooms on south Huron street at Mrs. Higley's, formerly Mr. Leetch's residence.

Prof. Lodeman has returned well pleased with his visit to Florida. He says that this state is making great strides forward. Mrs. Lodeman and children remain there at present.

Geo. Sly, a resident of Dixboro forty years ago and now living in Oakland Co. has been making his cousin Mr. Chas. McCormick a visit. He could not trace the old landmarks in our city, such a change.

Mr. Alexander R. Stoddart and his sister Miss Bessie from N. Y. came last Saturday to visit the scenes of their childhood. Their parents having resided in our city a number of years. Mr. Stoddart whom many remember, especially in the Baptist church having died here.

Mr. E. E. Whitney, an industrious and true printer, who has been in our employ several months left Tuesday to engage in Detroit. The too common frailty of printers, their wreck and ruin Whitney is free from, drink and the use of tobacco in any form.

Supervisor Yost and good wife were in the city Tuesday, looking over the art loan, accompanied by their son Wm. Yost, who is home for a few days from Kansas city. Mr. Yost described to us a marvel of a tobacco box picked up by his father in one of the battles of the revolutionary war with the date way back in 1600. It ought to be in the Art Loan.

Two aged mothers in Israel left Tuesday to reside at Flint. Mrs. E. G. Eldridge an esteemed member of the Presbyterian church, who has resided in the city twenty-seven years, seventy-four years old, and Mrs. P. Loomis the widow of Gen. Thos. Loomis who resided in the state of New York. Mrs. Loomis has for the last twelve years resided with her sister Mrs. Eldridge and is over eighty years old. She has been a faithful attendent and member of St. Lukes and will be missed. They have a sister at Flint.

Mrs. N. B. Perkins has been suffering with bleeding at the nose every day since last Friday, and has become very weak from the loss of blood. She is an energetic lady and having to refrain from household duties worries her more than the affliction, of which we hope she may not be troubled any more.—Oriska Benefit.

Good Words for a Good Thing.

All things are not humbugs, nor are all statements lies. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is exactly what it claims to be. Hear a word from Mr. Israel H. Snyder, of Saugerties N. Y. He says "My little daughter was covered with Salt Rheum from head to foot. Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy' cured her altogether, and the disease has never since appeared. This was two years ago." Such words go to the point. Get "Favorite Remedy" of your Druggist, or write to the Doctor, at Rondout, N. Y. $1.00 a bottle. 1015-2w

Home Relief should be in every house. All who try it, say it is the best pain remedy. sept

When you feel yourself gradually breaking down don't wait until you have taken to your bed. While you are still able to be up and about fight that grim monster disease by the use of proper restoratives. The best remedy for malaria, indigestion, weak kidneys, constant fatigue, fits of dizziness, heart disease, short breath and other complications of a disordered system is Brown's Iron Bitters. Its magic influence in conquering diseases of an exhaustive nature is most astonishing.

A GERMAN FARMER FOLLOWED BY UNKNOWN PARTIES AND KILLED FOR HIS MONEY.

DEXTER, Sept. 3.—The dead body mysteriously found near this place has been identified as that of John Sixt. He was about 30 years old, and a German. A picture found upon the dead man's person proves to be the likeness of a daughter of John Haad, a prominent farmer living about four miles north of Dexter. The murdered man had worked for Mr. Haad three summers. He left there on August 1; had $50 paid him, and said he was going to Ypsilanti to see an uncle and get some more money from him. He was seen in Ann Arbor a few days later, and the supposition is that he went from there to Ypsilanti to attend the firemen's tournament, and that he was murdered at that time. The sheriff of Marshall is at Dexter investigating the matter. There is not a particle of doubt about his identity. He was probably followed from Ypsilanti and murdered for his money.

Ladies, beware of imitations. The great popularity of BALL'S HEALTH PRESERVING CORSETS or Ball's Corsets with coiled spring elastic sections has induced unprincipled dealers to palm off on their unsuspecting customers a worthless imitation for the genuine article. We have begun prosecutions for fraud and damages against several dealers for this practice, and shall do the same with others as fast as we get evidence of this practice. The genuine article can not be sold at retail for less than $1,25, and any one who advertises or sells for less than that price, it is safe to presume are offering a fraudulent article. Any lady who purchases one of the genuine corsets can return it after two or three weeks' wear if not satisfied with it in every respect, and the price paid for it will be refunded.

In the Pilot House,

"Yes, sir; this kind of work obliges a man to keep sober as a judge. Of all men in the world, steamboat pilots and railroad engineers should let liquor alone. For on their clearness of sight and coolness of head depends the safety of life and property."

Keeping his hand on the wheel as he said this, Mr. A. Brockman, of No. 29½ Silver street, Chicago, added: "Of course, some of 'em drink; but the sober ones have the best positions and the best pay. Yes the work and exposure sometimes tells on us; but for my part, I find PARKER'S TONIC to be all the invigorant I need. I've got a bottle aboard here now; never go on a trip without it. When I haven't any appitite, or am in any way out of sorts, it sets me up in no time. If drinking men would use the Tonic it would help 'em to break off. (No, that isn't a light-house; it's a star, low down near the water.) As I was saying, the Tonic is new life bottled up. You see that flag-staff? Well with a bottle of PARKER'S TONIC in the locker I can keep malaria as far from me as that, all the time. My wife has used it for three years for summer complaints and colic, and as an invigorant, when she's tired out from overwork. She says the Tonic is a daisy. Good-bye! Don't break your neck going below."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. As unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting interior articles under the name of ginger, and as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation, itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONC, contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of HISCOX & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper. sept
